Meredith M.B.A. students win awards in regional competition

Five Meredith M.B.A. students attended the annual conference of the Southeast Case Research Association held in Myrtle Beach, SC, October 10-12, 1993. Each student had previously submitted an original case study based upon field research. The papers were blind reviewed and accepted for the conference in July. The papers were written by Elaine Buxton, Sharon Segrest, Laura Dupree, Alicia Bauman and Monica Hendricksen.

Hendrickson received the best case award, and Bauman received an honorable mention in the student division. Buxton, who graduated in May 1993, received a third place award in the faculty competition. The papers were written under the direction of Dr. James Crew, Associate Professor of Management.

The Southeast Case Research Association is an affiliate of the North American Case Research Association.

Its stated purposes are to:

- develop the case method of research, teaching and application,
- develop interdisciplinary case teaching note writing skills as defined by the American Assembly of Collegiate Schools of Business,
- advance individual analytical and reasoning skills,
- provide forums for the interchange of expertise among those who train and develop policy-making professionals, and
- promote the active exchange of information between case authors and interdisciplinary professionals in both public and private sectors.

An abstract of all sixty-eight papers presented at the conference was published in the Proceedings of the Southeast Case Research Association. The top three cases in each division will be published in their entirety in the Case Development Journal.
