

That's all folks...here's the rest of the staff

Shannon is a freshman writing for the Herald.

She is from Clinton and has a younger brother.

She enjoys scuba diving, running, and reading.

Her favorite author is William Faulkner, and she likes listening to Smashing Pumpkins and The Allman Brothers.

Shannon hopes to pursue the study of marine biology.

One of Shannon's quirks is her fondness for rice and black bean soup. Yes, she is one of those poor, starving vegetarians (like her editor) at Meredith.

Meagan Cronauer, a Meredith freshman, is a shining new reporter on the Herald staff. Meagan is an only child who presently lives in Fredericksburg, Va.

A few of Meagan's favorites are the color green, English and journalism, and the saying "I hope you know that this will go down on your permanent record."

She listens to progressive, industrial, and punk music. When in Washington D.C., Meagan enjoys visiting the section of D.C. called Georgetown.

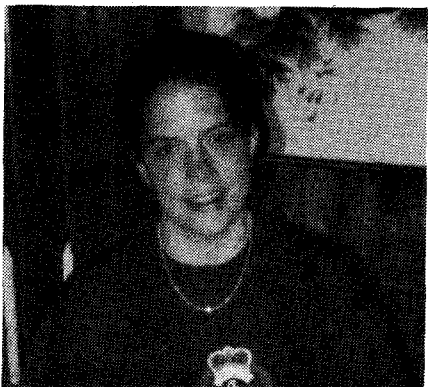

She spends her days shopping at stores like "Commander Salamander" and "Smash."

Jan Seate, a photographer for the newspaper, is a freshman this year. She is planning to major in English and teach high school. She is in the Teaching Fellows program and is from Durham. Her most embarrassing moment was when she was in sixth grade and she tripped over a chair and landed flat on her face.

The worst date she has ever had was when she went to Chili's with a guy she didn't know and didn't like very well. They had to wait in line for 45 minutes and they had nothing to talk about. Then when they sat down to eat they still didn't talk.

Jan likes to play basketball and likes to vacation at Myrtle Beach, S.C. Her favorite movie is Gone With the Wind.

Keri VanDoren, a Herald reporter, is a freshman who knows where she is going. She plans to major in English and possibly work as a journalist or freelance writer.

"Writing in this day and age is an unusual habit," said VanDoren. "I enjoy writing poetry of any kind." She also listens to any kind of music, except country.

Her favorite color is peach, and her favorite food is ham. The best book she has ever read is A Time to Kill by John Grisham.

VanDoren has two older brothers who are both single (if any Meredith women are interested).

Her most embarrassing moment happened during her senior year when her boyfriend took her home from school. She gathered her books, walked to his side of the car, and gave him a goodbye kiss. To her surprise and embarrassment, her mother had been watching from the window the entire time.

Carrie Shaw, business manager for the Herald, is originally from Nebraska, but moved to Garner when she was 12.

She loves North Carolina because she has the option of going to the beach, the piedmont and the mountains. She also said there are more things to do here, since the only thing to do in Nebraska is farm.

Shaw collects horses, and she dreams of getting one. Her grandparents' neighbors have one, and she feeds it.

Football is Shaw's favorite sport to watch. Her favorite college team is the Nebraska University Cornhuskers, and her favorite professional team is the Dallas Cowboys.

Shaw has an 18-year old sister, and people still mistake them for twins. This is amazing because Shaw is a senior in college, and her sister is only senior in high school.

When asked why she wanted to be the business manager for the Herald, Shaw said, "I love working with money. I also wanted to be involved and meet new people. It sounded interesting, and I wanted to see if I could do it on my own."

Her most embarrassing moment happened her senior year when she literally slid into class late, knocking her desk over on top of her.

The funniest thing was that the teacher was not even there yet to count her as tardy.

Kimberly Zucker is a junior this year. She is originally from Roanoke Rapids and an only child.

She is an English major, psychology minor and getting certified in secondary education.

Everyone always mispronounces her last name and she jokes about just spelling it "Zooker."

She also likes Kimberly, and not "Kim," but she says everyone shortens it anyway.

Her favorite color is red, and her favorite food is Chinese.

She loves to write poems, ice-skate, dance, and listen to "Phantom of the Opera."

Her favorite way to spend time is with her friends.
