

Now and Then: a must see for best friends

Now and Then is a movie all women must see. I'll try to do this movie justice in my review. But, take it from me, words can not explain just how good it is.

Now and Then, directed by Susan Todd and Demi Moore, took place during the 1960's. The movie opens up with the four girls; Roberta (by Rosie O'Donnell), Teenie (Melanie Griffith), Sam (Demi Moore), and Crissy (Rita Wilson) in adulthood. They are all reunited by a pact made when they were 12, which said that when they needed each other they would all come together again.

They then reminisce back to their childhood during the summer when they all were 12 years old. Their goals that summer consisted of getting enough money for a tree house, getting revenge on neighborhood boys, and finding out how Dear Johnny died. When trying to reach their goals the group went through trials and tribulations, but each girl also had her own goal to reach that summer. Sam wanted to overcome her father leaving and wanting a divorce, Crissy wanted to overcome her naivety, Roberta wanted to get over her mother's death, and Teenie was struggling to find herself and her destiny.

Through the summer they all wanted to become more independent from their families, but learned that they had become dependent on each other. The girls also learned that summer that they can not change the bad that has already happened, but to go on with life and make the best of everything.

This movie shows the true meaning of friendship, not to always judge people so quickly, that there is more to one than how he looks, and that your parents are not always right.

Now and Then is definitely one for a girl's night out. It will make you laugh, cry, and glad to be a female because it shows the real bond between women - one that men do not have. This movie is playing at Imperial Cinemas and at Six Forks, so the next time you do not have anything to do grab your best friend and go see this movie. You will be glad you did!

Meredith's Top Ten List

By Sarah White

From the home office of the third floor of Heilman dorm, here is tonight's top ten list of how to get a date for the White Iris Ball...

10. Sit in front of Johnson Hall and wait for the Gumby's Pizza delivery boy.
9. Sing "We love our boyfriends. Oh yes we do. We love our boyfriends and we'll be true..."
8. Walk around the Meredith mile with your new dress on for the dance.
7. Promise him he will be able to sample the "special" chicken cuisine at the dining hall.
6. Put on clothes other than sweatpants and sweatshirts when leaving campus.
5. Dress up like a Crayon and walk around Franklin Street in Chapel Hill.
4. Hang out in either Barefoot or Heilman's first floor parlors.
3. If you like men in uniform, a handful of policemen hang out at the Waffle House during Meredith after hours.
2. Play Jenga for hours at end at Caribou Coffee
1. Ask one of the N. C. State football players, they will have less competition than they do on the football field.
