Undergraduate conference is coming

ALISON VALENTI
Staff Reporter

Written an interesting paper lately? If you have, you are invited to present it in Meredith's first ever undergraduate research conference. The conference, organized by Beth Mulvaney of the art department is intended to showcase the work of Meredith students.

Students from all disciplines are encouraged to present a paper they have written on any topic. The presentation is reading the paper, and the time allotted for the presentation is 15 minutes--about an eight page paper. The papers can range from a student's thesis to just a provocative paper.

Sponsored by the Creative Ideas Fund, the conference was inspired by Mulvaney's art students. They expressed an interest in the conferences that Mulvaney attends in her career.

"One of the things I want to accomplish is a greater level of confidence for students," said

Mulvaney.

To encourage students to present their works, cash prizes will be awarded to the top three papers from Meredith College. In addition to possible cash rewards, students will have the opportunity to be part of a large academic forum, demonstrate academic pride and to get a feel for what is happening among the different departments at Meredith. Presenting a paper is also a fabulous addition to a resume.

The forum is designed to benefit Meredith students, but students from campuses around the triangle are invited to participate in the conference. This will allow Meredith to see what other schools are doing and how Meredith stacks up against them.

"It's a level playing field; it's our job to push you [Meredith students] out there," said Mulvaney.

Parents and audience are welcome. According to Mulvaney, the more people who see the academic side of Meredith, the better.

Mulvaney attends several conferences like this a year and enjoys them immensely. She is hoping to make to the conference the annual event.

Interested students should submit a one-page abstract, which consists of the thesis of the paper and some of the subtopics, to Professor Beth Mulvaney of the art department by March 17, 1998.

All students, faculty and staff are encouraged to participate in the conference April 25, 1998 at Meredith College.

Weems talked about Founder's Day and described how it was important to remember those persons who made Meredith great. Weems also mentioned Erika Woodlief, whom he described as being one of those people that made Meredith distinguished. At the conclusion of the ceremony, Weems and Granddaughter's Club vice-president Leigh Stensvad placed a daisy wreath on the memorial. "I liked it because I think it gives you a chance to take a moment and think about why the memorial is there," said Jennifer Richardson, secretary of the club.
