on vacation.

She said of spring break, "It will give me a chance to relax, forget about my worries and have fun with my friends."

Juniors Lori Neff and Courtney Mashburn are looking forward to spring break because they will be traveling to Cancun, Mexico.

Neff said that she and Mashburn plan to go scuba diving, snorkeling and shopping, and they plan to work on their tan.

Neff said that she and Mashburn will be participating in several hotel activities, each of which is a part of the all-inclusive package they received from a travel agent in the Raleigh area.

This package includes the hotel room, meals, snacks, theme dinners at the hotel and various other activities.

Neff added that the travel agent puts together packages for local college students. Neff and Mashburn will leave for Cancun on Mar. 11 for a five-night vacation.

Although many students will be heading for warm weather, juniors Sara Ellen Carwile and Kelli Parrish will be packing their skis.

Carwile noted that during their four-day trip to Snowshoe, W.Va., she hopes to do a lot of skiing depending on the weather.

Carwile also said that this will be the first Spring Break trip she has taken, and she said that she plans to "relax and celebrate being out of school."

Progress reports alert students

Progress Reports for students working on either a 'D' or an 'F' level in any class go out on Friday, Mar. 10 — just in time for students to go on spring break.

Two copies of the report are sent out, one to the student and one to her advisor.

"The reports are to alert you that you're not doing as well as you may have thought you were," said a worker in the Office of the Registrar.

Some professors even cite specific reasons for poor grades, and professors often include ways that students can try to improve on upcoming assignments.

Both the professor and the members of the Office of the Learning Center. Both of these places offer classes, one-on-one time and literature on ways to improve study skills, ways to manage time, and even extra help in some areas.

"Progress Reports are meant to help students. We hope they do," said staffers in the Registrar's Office.

And maybe spring break will provide students with rest to come back refreshed for classes.
