MOSCOW, Russia

Chechen rebels are the suspected responsible parties for an explosion in a Russian subway that killed 39 people and injured more than 100 others on Friday.

Witnesses were interviewed and a composite sketch was drawn after the attack. The information for the sketch came from video surveillance of people in the subway before the attack.

From the sketch, authorities were able to detain two people and questioned them for nearly three hours on Saturday. A woman is believed to be responsible for the attack. She is seen with an accomplice on the videotape.

The seventh earthquake to hit the P a p u a p r o v i n c e struck on Saturday in the eastern part. The quake measured 7.1 on the Richter scale. As of yet, no casualties have been reported. However, a earthquake on Friday killed nearly 24 people. The scale rating of Saturday's quake leads authorities to surmise that a number of casualties could accumulate.
