Refreshments Available

Description: St. Benedict's School for Boys has long had a clientele of young men from rich and powerful families, though none so trouble-making as present student Sedgewick Bell. Classics professor Arthur Hundert (Kline) finds this boy to be a challenge, but an intriguing one. The student and professor clash in their approach to life, and both are trying to take the other students on campus down a different life path. Arthur tries to make a difference in this young rebel's life, but over a span of 20 years he finds that it is his life that has been transformed.

Reaffirm Your Commitment:

The Honor Pledge will be on display in the Johnson Hall Rotunda. Members of the Meredith community are asked to sign the pledge during the week of Feb. 23 to reaffirm their commitment to the pledge.

URP Issues a Call For Submissions

TIFFANY ADAMS
Editor in Chief

Meredith's Fourth Annual Undergraduate Research Conference will be held on April 22, 2004, a day designated for "Celebrating Student Achievement." Meredith's Undergraduate Research Program recently issued a call for submissions for posters, presentations and performances for this year's conference.

The Research Conference showcases research, scholarship and creative activity in all fields of study. Presentations in the form of oral summaries, posters, performances and exhibits will be scheduled during the day.

Submissions to the Conference will be reviewed for scholarly work that moves beyond what is already known and takes ideas in a new direction, scholarly work that exemplifies the methods for new discovery or accomplishment in one's field of study, and whether the submission is a culminating presentation consistent with the scholarly or creative traditions of the discipline.

According to the Research Conference website, Celebrating Student Achievement also honors accomplishments that parallel research projects in their contributions to the life of Meredith College. In addition to the Undergraduate Research Conference, events throughout the day will feature students' fulfillment of goals in all dimensions of learning. This will involve successes in fields as diverse as sport and music, leadership and professional practice, service and community involvements.

The submission deadline for this year's conference is March 3. Those interested in submitting abstracts can download the submission form at <http://www.meredith.edu/achievement/call4submissions.htm>. The Undergraduate Research Program will send written notification about program acceptance by March 19.

Completed submission forms should be sent to the Undergraduate Research Program Office, Rhonda Zingraff, Director, 100 Ledford Hall, Meredith College.

Psi Chi to Host Holocaust Researcher at Spring Colloquium

TIFFANY ADAMS
Editor in Chief

Jerome Rosenberg, Ph.D., Associate Professor in the Department of Psychology and the New College Program at the University of Alabama will speak at the annual Spring Colloquium in Psychology tomorrow at 4 p.m. in 101 Ledford. The Colloquium is hosted by Meredith's Chapter of Psi Chi, the national honorary society in psychology.

Rosenberg's teaching and research interests include the Holocaust and other examples of Massive Human Destructiveness, Human and Humane Survival, Ethics and Social Issues, Prejudice and Social Movements and Interdisciplinary Models of Teaching.

At the Colloquium tomorrow afternoon, Rosenberg will discuss how he became involved in Holocaust research. He will talk with students about his various trips to concentration camps and his work with Holocaust survivors and on Holocaust Commemorations.

The presentation will feature the early role of psychologists in Holocaust research and the current efforts in understanding genocide, perpetrators and generational aspects of Holocaust survival and trauma. In addition, his presentation will touch on the role of prejudice in the Holocaust and all genocides. Finally, Rosenberg will provide suggestions for future involvement for psychologists in Holocaust research.

He is a charter member of the Association of Genocide Scholars. He has served as Chair of the Alabama Holocaust Advisory Council and is currently a member of the Alabama Holocaust Commission.

Rosenberg has worked with Holocaust survivors, and he has served on the Hospice of West Alabama Ethical Review Board. Rosenberg currently teaches in the University of Alabama Thanatology Certificate Program and serves on its planning board. He has published on the issues of dehumanization and the Holocaust.

Rosenberg received his doctorate from Florida State University in Clinical Psychology.

The Meredith College Office of Study Abroad
Invites you to meet with a representative
From Institute for Study Abroad
Butler University
Friday, February 27
11 a.m. to 1 p.m.

The Office of Study Abroad is delighted to offer you an opportunity to meet with Steve Seaworth, a representative from IFSA-Butler. Steve will be on hand to discuss study abroad programs in Australia, New Zealand, England, Scotland, Ireland, Wales, Northern Ireland, Argentina, Chile, and Costa Rica.

In addition to answering your questions about the academic aspects of Study Abroad, Steve can also discuss the nitty gritty details: cost, financial assistance, meals, accommodations, and travel. Steve will be available for general questions from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. in Belk Dining Hall.

Friday, February 27 is the only day Steve will be on our campus this semester. Don't pass up this excellent opportunity to learn more about internationalizing your education!
