

If you follow these simple rules your cookout will be safer and more fun, and your fireman-neighbor also will have a pleasant summer, says O. K. Foster, fire chief.

BEACH PATROL Using a specially equipped four-wheel drive vehicle the Carteret County Sheriff's Department is patrolling the beach from Fort Macon to Emerald Isle on a daily basis. The patrol, which is manned by Harry G. Williams, a deputy sheriff, began March 1 and makes a tour of the beach at various times during the day and on seek-ends. The car is fitted with regular police equipment including first aid emergency gear. The project is sponsored by CAMA and the Carteret County Sheriff's Department.

Mr. Williams pointed out that under the law no vehicles are allowed on the beach, except those with special permits the users of which are sport or commercial fishermen. No vehicles including motorcycles, are allowed on the strand during the months of June, July and August.

Violators will be given a summons under the law which the County Commissioners passed in December 1979, which restricts the use of vehicles on the beach. However, Mr. Williams said if citizens witness a violation they should call 8-728-3772 to report it with a description of the violator and the license number. The Sheriff's department will appreciate the help of citizens.

OUR NEW Sally and Don Winters, friends of Ann and George Hitch, moved here April 28 from Rochester, New York. They are the new owners of the house at the corner of Sycamore Drive and Birch Court. Don retired from Eastman Kodak, where he had been a safety engineer in the Utilities Division. His hobbies are gold, swimming, fishing, reading and bridge. Sally, a retired nurse, likes bridge, but wants to learn to golf and fish. They have a son, a daughter and one granddaughter.

NEIGHBORS Kim and Richard Cooper moved from Jacksonville, Florida to Cedar Road during our snowstorm in March. Richard has been in the U.S. Coast Guard for five years and expects to be here for at least three more years. He is a First Class Petty Officer of personnel and also works as Operations Watch Officer. Kim works as a teller at the downtown First-Citizens Bank. She likes to cook, has written poetry and some day hopes to write for a living. Both Richard and Kim enjoy boating and horseback riding. They have a son, Richard II, who will be four years old in June.

Dorothy and Gus Panagakos, parents of Joanne Palumbo, visited Pine Knoll Shores many times, loved it, and decided to retire here. Joanne designed and planned their new home at 190 Salter Path, just west of Maple Court. Before retiring, Gus had his own wholesale fruit and vegetable business in Paramus, New Jersey. Both like all sports, play a lot of pool, and are looking forward to fishing, golfing and learning how to operate their new boat. Dorothy likes to sew clothing and makes her own drapery. In the past she was a professional dressmaker and dress designer. Gus's mother lives with them. They have two daughters, one son, and four granddaughters ranging in age from 8 months to five and a half years.

OTHER NEW Town has new Mayor, Wayne Cleveland, new commissioner, Larry Jerome; Ken and Newell Haller have new tee shirts; and Officer Ritchie Del Mese has a new bride.
