GARDEN CLUB VISITS Some 45 Garden Club members with their husbands and guests, traveled to Wilmington on Wednesday, April 8 to view two of the better known azalea gardens. Marian Archibald was chairman of the day's events, which included lunch at the Gray Gables restaurant.

The group first toured the Airlie Gardens, which are kept mainly in a natural state. Even though the azaleas were not completely in full bloom the display was spectacular including the camellias, jasmine, banksai roses and the majestic moss-covered oaks and towering pines.

Following lunch, the group traveled to the Orton Plantation, where because these azaleas are an earlier variety, the grounds were a blaze of color. The formal gardens had been planted with banks of pansies, which will be replaced in mid-May with other blooming annuals. Again, the moss-covered trees and exotic ornamentals were fascinating.

Before leaving Wilmington the group drove through the municipally owned Greenfield Gardens and Park where hundreds of azaleas, dogwoods, camellians and wisteria were in bloom beside the huge pines and cypress trees. This was a spectacular bonus on the trip.

If the shrubs are planted this spring the display next year should be most interesting and it is hoped everyone who can will participate.
