

"So, you can see we didn't encourage him," observed Brenda Cox, assistant town clerk.

One of those upset by peddler Mims was town commissioner Jack Thompson who asked the PKS planning board "to look into it so that we won't have a string of peddlers along Salter Path Road."

So, at its September meeting, the planning board began its consideration of an ordinance to ban peddling in Pine Knoll Shores similar to an Atlantic Beach ordinance. The proposal would make it "unlawful for any peddler ... to engage in the sale or barter of any goods within the town limits of Pine Knoll Shores." Discussion of the proposed ordinance was postponed until the board's next meeting.

At its session on September 26, Town Clerk Corinne Geer administered the oath of office to the board's four new members, Marty Hare, Robert Whitmore, Clyde Lynn and John Shedd.

The board then discussed a proposed zoning ordinance for the Episcopal Camp and Conference Center properties, a 52.5-acre tract in the newly annexed western section of Pine Knoll Shores. Chairman George Falkenberg asked the board members to study the draft and said a special meeting would be called if further changes are proposed. The ordinance would permit use of the property for churches, schools, camps and related meetings as well as single family residences. Living units in the area could not exceed eight per acre.

James and Doris Blackwell have moved to their new home at 143 Mimosa Drive. Originally from Winston-Salem, they have lived in Atlantic Beach for four and a half years. Jim is with Smith Realty there and while a resident, served on the Atlantic Beach Planning Board.

OUR NEW Doris is a teacher. While living in Winston-Salem she taught English and NEIGHBORS art at Ledford High School. Since moving to the Crystal Coast she has been teaching English at Carteret Community College.

The Blackwells enjoy coastal living. Jim is particularly interested in boating and fishing. He also has a pilot's license and likes to fly. Doris plays golf but her very favorite activity is painting. She works in all media, concentrating on portraits for the most part. Her work is effectively displayed throughout the house.

The Blackwells came to know Pine Knoll Shores through the Engstroms who have owned property on Oakleaf for many years. Trudy Engstrom is Doris' sister. Jim's knowledge of the area through his business confirmed the choice. They have one son living in Winston-Salem.

Dick and Wanda Lettan of 107 Walnut Circle come to Pine Knoll Shores from Pittsford, New York. Dick was a project engineer for Kodak specializing in the design of medical equipment. Before joining Kodak he worked in the aerospace program where he took many simulated trips to the moon and outer space. Wanda was in the insurance business in Pittsford. They are both retired now.

The Lettans have five children and four grandchildren scattered from upstate New York to Hawaii. Their oldest is a colonel in the Air Force and their youngest is a student of electronic engineering.

About ten years ago they decided to look for their retirement location and made a systematic search up and down the coast. When they found Pine Knoll Shores they knew they had found it. They are impressed with the community and expect to do a lot of the boating
