

During these years, Jan and David acquired an international family though their activities in the Pittsburgh Council for International Visitors. They would find live-in families for the temporary foreign college student help them with paper work, doing anything necessary to ease their U.S. experience. As a result of occasional home dinners with them, and visits from student's parents whom they brought to meet Jan and David, several long-time relationships were established. These resulted in ensuing visits to the Netherlands, Japan and other countries by the Griffiths. This very summer they are expecting Dutch friends and their children to visit.

As of now, Jan is a newly-elected social chairman of Newcomers' Club, and is playing a bit of bridge, meanwhile looking forward to deciding what other activities will tempt her energetic nature.

Thus, ready, waiting, looking forward, the Griffiths are indeed welcome newcomers to Pine Knoll Shores. Greetings and welcome! Enjoy!

BOAT OUTING

Despite a stiff breeze causing the seas to churn into white caps, the distant rumble of thunder and black scudding clouds that threatened rain, the intrepid members of the Pine Knoll Shores Yacht Club set sail for the disappearing island opposite the Bluffs in the Sound.

Under the direction of Commodore Paul Heim, those that made the perilous journey tied up in proper rafting fashion, bow line to bow line, spring lines taut and when completed, the Commodore ordered rations of food and grog be broken out for all hands. Even though no one ventured to shore, a good time was had by one and all. The Commodore even opened his boat to a close inspection and all who came aboard marvelled at Paul's shipshape cabin and meticulously vacuumed carpeting.

A few of the sailors who would have made the trip were plagued by motor problems. The Dick Guilfoyle boat had to be towed back to base by Ralph Jordan after an ominous clank stopped his progress dead in the water. Oh well, there will be a next time!

There has been a change in the date of the next planned picnic to conform to the low tide schedule. Nancy Marshall informs us that the new date is Tuesday, August 27 at 3:00 p.m. See all you sailors there!
