In other business May 11, the board of commissioners approved a contract with Youngblood Construction for emergency pumping in 2007-08 if storms make such activity necessary. A contract was also given to Coastal Plains of Jacksonville to clear and remove vegetative and other debris in the aftermath of a storm. The contracts establish hourly rates for the performance of services if necessary.

Try your Hand at Scrimshaw At Workshops in Beaufort

Starting at 10 a.m. Thursday, June 14, guests at the Beaufort Historic site will have an opportunity to participate in a scrimshaw workshop led by volunteer Ed Bloxom.

Scrimshaw is usually defined as carving or embellishment of ivory or bone. Yet, today's definition would more likely be thought of as the intricate incising or engraving of ivory to produce images of unbelievable detail. The scrimshaw craft began as a "waste not, want not" method practiced by native hunters. Not wanting to waste the teeth and bones of the animals they hunted for food, native cultures invented an entirely new style of art that is one of a handful of truly original American art forms.

Today scrimshaw is still practiced by masters of the art and their work is highly sought after and collected. Perhaps the most noted collector was President John F. Kennedy, who displayed many of his most cherished pieces of ivory scrimshaw in the Oval Office of the White House.

Ed Bloxom, a multi-talented craftsman, is a master of the scrimshaw process and resident of Havelock. Join him for this Living History program and participate. There is a materials fee of $20.00. Call the Beaufort Historic Assn. at 252-728-5225 to reserve your space.
