

Seen on Acorn Court

Pine Knoll Shores resident Bill Brophy is a skilled and prolific wood carver. These seasonal decorations are among his creations that make an appearance on the welcoming sign at the end of the driveway.—Photos by Connie Brophy

Share your pictures on the Town Crier pages; send them to shoreline@townofpks.com.

During preparations for Hurricane Arthur in 2014, Town Manager and proud USMC veteran Brian Kramer takes a break to catch up on email. The question remains: what's up with the Air Force shirt? —Photo by Ken Jones

Pine Knoll Shores residents Martha and Clark Edwards joined daughter Sue Dresser, husband Kip and grandchildren Stone, Eli and Ripley for a Disney World visit at Thanksgiving. A highlight of the Disney visit was the opportunity to celebrate Ripley's 8th birthday while missing 10 inches of Massachusetts snow. Pictured left to right are Ripley and Eli (front row), Clark, Stone, Sue and Kip.

—Photo by Martha Edwards

Pine Knoll Shores residents Pete Hilton and son Adam (yellow jacket) caught these red drum in late December just a mile east of Shark Island. They were well above slot at 39-plus inches, and were released. Says Pete, "The school was so big it looked like we were approaching a sand bar."

—Photos courtesy of the Hilton family