What's This?

Hats Off To The Blanket Mill

D. A. Purcell, superintendent of the Blanket and Sheeting Mills in Draper is here shown presenting the Safety Trophy to Superintendent C. A. Davis, of the Blanket Mill, while the overseers lock proudly on. The trophy, awarded by the North Carolina Cotton Manufacturers Association, was given to the mill employing over 850 persons that had the smallest number of disabling injuries during the past year. This is a signal honor, a tribute to every worker in the Blanket Mill. In the group, left to right, are: Overseers Strader, Shop; Perry, Weave Room; Baker, Wool Carding; Supt. Purcell; Moore, Jack Spinning; Harris, Cloth Inspecting; May, Dye House; Supt. Davis; Marlowe, Wool Picking; and Funderburk, Ring Spinning and Carding. Insert shows the handsome trophy.

NO DETOURS

Woman (whose car had stalled in the middle of the street): "Why did you bump into me? Couldn't you have driven around my car?"

Man: "Lady, I only have an 'A' card."

This picture was taken in Africa and at first glance it would seem that an American sailor had fallen into the hands of one of the fierce tribesmen in that country. But don't worry, the sailor is Manuel Sowers, and he's plenty capable of taking care of himself. The native, awesome head dress and all, is a guide, but we'd hesitate to follow him—even to the paying teller's window.

Attention Hunters

A. D. Neal, county game protector, gives the following table for the different hunting seasons. Sorry, boys, but while Mr. Neal can tell us when we can knock over a few quails and bunnies he cannot tell us where we can find the shells to do it with. Anyway, if you're lucky enough to have a few shells here's when you can use them:

- Squirrels: October 1 to January 1.
- Rabbits: November 25 to February 10.
- Quail: November 25 to February 10.
- Opossum: October 1 to February 15.
- Raccoon: October 1 to February 15.
