What Are Your Chances?

By M. P. MILLER

Director of Industrial & Public Relations

Sooner or later the worker who takes chances with his personal safety is going to have an accident. He may get by for a long time while disregarding safety rules and practices and escape unhurt. But if he continues he is bound to suffer an injury.

The reason for this is that there are certain mathematical laws at work and whereas an unsafe act may be repeated many times such violations will finally result in an injury.

What are your chances? Are you using all of your knowledge and common sense to help you avoid conditions and circumstances which might cause you to have an accident? Or are you trusting your safety to chance?

You can do much to improve your chances of remaining safe from accidents by taking the necessary precautions on the job. This means keeping machine guards in place, maintaining good housekeeping, following safety rules, and practicing safe work habits.

Your chances of remaining accident-free are up to you. Your attitude toward your own safety and that of others and your everyday actions will determine whether or not you will experience an injury.

Play it safe. Don't take chances.

Letters From Servicemen

Dear Editor:

I have been in Korea for the past 8 months . . . but now my address has changed again.

I think it is pretty nice of you to put these letters in the paper because one letter that you printed was from my first cousin, Sgt. Kenneth O. Hall which led us to meeting each other over here. I also met SFC William C. Fain who is an old friend of mine from back home. It sure makes a guy feel good to meet someone from home.

I am planning on leaving here in July to come home and stay for awhile. I hope! I would like to say hello to all my friends in the Jack Spinning Department and especially to Frank Jones, an old friend of mine, and that I will be back in the Jack Spinning with them soon.

Dear Mr. Thomas:

Just a few lines as I return the form for my military bonus. I sure do thank the company for giving it to us. It will come in handy, but I had rather be back there working with my friends at Fieldcrest Mills.

Volunteer Workmen Aid Draper Y.M.C.A.

"Let's do it ourselves" seems to be the motto of the directors and interested members at Draper Y.M.C.A. Volunteers have worked many hours to make various improvements about the building and premises. Blanket Mill men shown painting one of the rooms at the "Y", left to right, are: J. Clyde Minter, "Wick" Overby, and Melvin Moore. Tommy Harden, who did a lot of painting, is not shown in photograph.

Jimmie: "Mommie, may I have the wishbone?"

Mother: "Not until you eat your spinach."

Jimmie: "But I wanted to wish I didn't have to eat it."
