security to qualify for retirement benefits.

Survivors of workers who died in 1958 or later and who were not eligible for benefits before this change may now be eligible. These people should inquire at their social security office soon.

Another change in the law makes it possible for people eligible for social security benefits to earn up to $1700 and receive more in total earnings and benefits than under the old law.

Under both the old and the new law, a beneficiary can earn $1200 a year and receive all of his monthly social security benefits. The old law, though, required $1 in benefits to be withheld for each $2 earned from $1200 to $1500, and $1 for each $1 earned over $1500.

Under the new law, $1 is withheld for each $2 earned from $1200 to $1700, and then $1 for each $1 earned over $1700. Thus, under the new law only $250 in benefits is deducted when the beneficiary earns $1700 during the year. Under the old law $350 would have been withheld.

The disability insurance program remains unchanged, except that workers with long-standing disabilities are given another year, until June 30, 1962, to file claims for benefits.

Increases in benefits for widows and for those getting minimum benefits will be made automatically before the August checks are mailed early in September. It will not be necessary for these people to contact the social security office.

Some other people affected by the amendments to the law must apply before their benefits can be started. Among them are older workers who formerly did not have enough credit for work under social security to receive benefits, workers between 62 and 65 who wish to retire now with reduced benefits, and dependent widowers or fathers.

These people should get in touch with their nearest social security office, or see their social security representative.
