Sheet Finishing Has Best Safety Record

Employees of the Sheet Finishing Mill currently have the best safety record at Fieldcrest Mills. They have accumulated over 1½ million man-hours of accident-free work, averaging 6,186 safe hours per employee.

In recognition of their fine record, the Sheet Finishing employees were treated to a Kentucky Fried Chicken dinner, served right in the mill, to all of the employees on all shifts.

The Sheet Finishing plant is one of the first mills to earn a third consecutive safety award dinner in the safety contest. Under this program, the Company gives a dinner to the employees of any mill which operates for an average of 2,000 hours per employee without a disabling injury.

There has been no disabling injury at the Sheet Finishing Mill since January 26, 1966. Through November 1, 1968, the Sheet Finishing Mill had operated 1,527,862 man-hours without any lost time due to injury. The employees are continuing their accident-free record to date.

W. Giles Hunnings, manager of the Sheeting Operation, and William A. Galloway, superintendent of the Sheet Finishing Mill, congratulated the employees on their outstanding safety record and thanked them for their cooperation in the prevention of accidents.

In commenting on the top safety record, Kenneth R. Baggett, Fieldcrest safety director, said:

"This is an outstanding achievement of which the entire company can be proud. I commend the Sheet Finishing employees and urge them to continue their excellent record into the future."
