

BS Cloth Room Has Long Record Of Safe Work

The employees of the Inspecting Department at the Bedsread Mill, Eden, enjoyed a "safety break" recently in celebration of their long record of safe work.

The supervisors served free coffee and cakes to all employees in recognition of their interest in safety and their successful efforts in the prevention of accidents.

Safety Department records show that employees of the Inspecting Department have worked for 12 years since 1957 without any lost time due to injury and have accumulated well over a million accident-free man-hours.

The records are not readily available for the years prior to 1957, but an issue of The Mill Whistle in 1957 reported that the Inspecting Department employees had worked 20 years without a disabling injury.

On that basis, the department could be well past the 30-year mark since the last lost-time accident occurred.

In a message to the employees announcing the "safety break," members of the mill management congratulated them on their outstanding record and thanked them for their interest and cooperation in the prevention of on-the-job accidents.

Pictures above show some of the Inspecting Department employees as they celebrated their fine achievement in safety.
