ATMI President Discusses Industry's Future

Charles F. Myers Jr., president of the American Textile Manufacturers Institute, told the Northern Textile Association that the 1970s promise "un-precedented opportunities" for the industry.

But he cautioned that the Vietnam war "cannot continue indefinitely without serious long-term damage to all aspects of our economic, social and political institutions."

And on a matter of primary concern to the industry-competition of imported textiles in the domestic market-Mr. Myers said "Congressional action is essential if Japan and others will not cooperate in voluntary agreement.

"The vast markets of the '70s will require a tremendous output of textiles and related products," Mr. Myers said.

"Real personal income will increase well over 50 percent in the course of the '70s.

"Per capita consumption will jump 40 per cent by 1980, the population of young adults will grow twice as fast as the total population, and the college trained group will be 50 per cent greater.

"According to the National Industrial Conference Board, our economy will grow at an annual rate of 4.4 per cent in the '70s, against a 4 per cent average rate since World War II. By 1980 this will add up to a total output of goods and services of $1.5 trillion or a real increase of 55 per cent in gross nation-

"We can anticipate an acceleration in the rate of family formations as more of our young people head for the altar. There will be 55 million husband-wife families by 1980-10 million more than at the beginning of the decade.

"Household formation will grow 20 per cent, to a household population of 75 million by 1980.

"The opportunities for serving this expanding new generation of consumers are evident but we must adapt to changing markets more quickly than ever," Mr. Myers said.
