Young Workers Receive SS If Badly Disabled

have been payable since July 1957. Originally, payments were limited to those 50 or older. Subsequently, benefits were provided for the dependents of disabled workers and benefits were made payable to disabled workers under 50.

Until the 1967 social security amendments, a person who became severely disabled had to have worked 5 out of the last 10 years to be eligible for disability benefits. That excluded many young wage earners felled by illness or other disabling conditions that could be expected to deprive them of their incomes for at least a year.

Congress changed that by easing the work requirements for persons who become disabled before the age of 31. If you become disabled before you are 24 you need social security credit for only 1½ years of work in the 3 years before you became disabled. The work requirement increases gradually from 18 months at age 24 (or less) to 5 years at age 31.
