

Sheeting Mill Group Has Excellent Record

Thirty-five employees of the Draper Sheeting Mill had perfect attendance on the job in 1969. Several of them had worked every scheduled day in 1968 as well.

In commenting on the excellent attendance records, R. C. Going, superintendent of the mill, said:

"We want to congratulate these employees and express appreciation for the interest they have shown in their jobs by being present every day. They not only have helped the mill maintain production schedules, but also have helped themselves by their increased earnings.

"It should be kept in mind that working every day results not only in full paychecks now, but the greater earnings will be reflected in such future payments as vacation pay and pension benefits, which are based on the employee's earnings."
