Dedication Program Is Held For YMCA

The new Eden YMCA, as the Central YMCA of 60 years ago, "came to serve the community", Luther H. Hodges, former North Carolina Governor and U. S. Secretary of Commerce, said Sunday, June 20, in the dedicatory address for the new Eden YMCA Family Center on Kennedy Street.

Citing the training and influence of the YMCA that touched thousands of lives in the community, he said the old YMCA "filled the need of the times. The YMCA today offers more than at any time in its history of the things that young people need."

Discussing the new YMCA, Mr. Hodges praised the Fieldcrest Foundation which he said provided the "seed money"—a $400,000 challenge gift which the community more than matched—and praised the people of the community for their cooperation and their generosity in contributing to the project.

Prior to retiring in 1950 to enter public service, Mr. Hodges was for over 30 years associated with Marshall Field & Company's manufacturing division, the predecessor to Fieldcrest Mills, Inc.

At the time of his retirement he was a vice president of Marshall Field & Company and general manager of the Fieldcrest Mills division.

W. D. Lashley, Jr., president of the Eden YMCA who was general campaign chairman of the building committee, presided at the ceremonies.

A. G. Singleton, retired Fieldcrest division vice president-engineering and now mayor of Eden, spoke briefly praising the people of the community for their vision and cooperation in bringing about the new YMCA. Mr. Singleton himself was chairman of construction and was cited for his intense interest and valuable services in connection with the project.

Paul L. Peterson, who retired as YMCA executive director two years ago and then helped lead the successful fund-raising campaign for the new building, also spoke briefly. He said the new "Y" represents an accomplishment that the entire community can be proud of.

Mr. Hodges was introduced by Mrs. W. B. Weaver, substituting for her husband.
