

There's ROOM for safety from

TOP

Before using a ladder, inspect it for defects and slippery conditions.

When going up or down, face the ladder, and use hands for maintaining grip only. Use a line to raise or lower tools and such items.

The distance along the ground from the base of the ladder to the object on which it rests should be one quarter of the distance along the face of the ladder from its base to its point of support.

The top of the ladder should extend at least three rungs above the point of support on a roof or a scaffold.

Avoid leaning over the side rail when working on a ladder. Move the ladder when work is beyond normal reach.

At windows, lash a board across the top of the ladder to allow a bearing on solid surfaces at each side of the window.

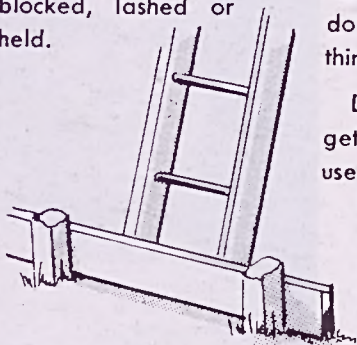

Don't use a metal ladder around conductors of electricity.

A ladder with spiked feet is not for use on hard surfaces such as concrete.

Never slide down a ladder.

Ladders not equipped with safety feet should be solidly blocked, lashed or held.

Have both feet of the ladder on a level base. Provide solid footing on soft ground to prevent the ladder from sinking, and don't set it on or against anything that might move.

Don't lash short ladders together to make a long one, or use them as scaffolds or runways.
