WCU Students Visit Fieldcrest Store

Girls examine Fieldcrest towels at store.

Eight students in interior design from Western Carolina University visited the Karastan Rug Mill and the Fieldcrest Store recently. Accompanying the students was Jane Hyatt, instructor in interior design. In the photographs, the students admire products at the Fieldcrest store.

Special G

JAMES T. FRANKLIN

Graduation time is something special to all of us. (Jimmy) Franklin, 33, has worked at the Karastan Mill continuously for 10 years. He recently was awarded a high school diploma certificate by the North Carolina State Board of Education after receiving it after completing four days of study administered by the Technical Institute. He was told by his instructor that he did better than most youngsters who take the tests. Mr. Franklin said he had no particular preparation for the examinations but was confident of the fact that "I read a lot of math on my own." With continuous study over 20 years, Mr. Franklin worked in various classifications in the Weave Room. He is married and has a son now attending college. The family lives at 1100 Road in Eden.
