health departments.

"At this time, local health departments have not received enough vaccine to supply local industries with adequate amounts to immunize their employees," Dr. Young said.

"Therefore, employees at Eden and Fieldale will need to go to their respective health departments' mass clinics in order to obtain the swine influenza immunizations. Such clinics already have been held at Forest City and one is scheduled to be held in Eden Sunday, November 21.

"If enough vaccine is available after these clinics, the local health officers have advised us that they will release vaccine for industrial immunization campaigns. In this case, employees will be notified by notices on the mill bulletin boards," Dr. Young said.

The Medical Department already has given the swine flu shots to employees at North Carolina Finishing, Columbus Towel Mill, Swift Spinning, the Greenville plants and Mt. Holly. Employees at Forest City and Whiteville received the shots from the local health departments.

Fieldcrest, Karastan and North Carolina Finishing sales personnel in New York will receive the inoculations through public health departments. All other sales offices and distribution centers either have been given the shots or advised to obtain them from their health departments.

Scottsboro employees will receive Hong Kong flu shots, administered by the Medical Department on December 2. All other locations already have received the Hong Kong flu immunizations.

Artist's Career Flourishing

Fieldale artist Margaret Lawson is expanding her second career by leaps and bounds.

A third shift roving hauler at the Fieldale Towel Mill, she took up painting as a hobby several years ago. Now her reputation as an artist has spread so that her water colors are almost continuously on exhibit.

During the summer, she had work on exhibit in Roanoke, Va., in June, and in West Virginia in July. In October she also exhibited in the annual Foot of the Hills Art Show in Martinsville, Va., in which she won first prize last year.

She has now been invited to participate in the West Virginia Appalachian Arts and Crafts Festival to be held in Beckley, W.Va., in January of 1977. This is particularly exciting for her because Beckley is her hometown.

In addition to exhibiting paintings, Margaret is selling quite a number of Finding the time for her art work and holding a full-time job at the Towel Mill plus the duties of a mother and homemaker sometimes is a little hectic," Margaret said.

"But I love every minute of it. My painting is very relaxing and I really enjoy exhibiting and seeing other artists. They are really the best critics of an artist's work."
