Tho Mystic Masonic Tie.

Ia the wildorness of E lum the hand

 Che children of Tshazel is still raised as of oid aguinat every stranger, bat if some Mason of this city ware to meet these marauding sons of the desert, at the sign of Fellow-ctaft, every matchlock wand be instantly lowered, and he would be wel-is friend of ours-an officer of our $\mathbb{N}$ vy long sinfe deceased -was once wanlering about in the narrow lines of $a n$ Bistern c.ty, having lost his way in their inestricable labyrinths. Suddenly he was startled by the fiightful words, "'hristian dog! Chriotim dog! !" He turned, and beheld approaching him a crowd of enraged Nahometans, each with a large stone in ins uplifted hand. The heatemant saw no escape from the most ierrible of ceaths; for wiht the exception of the mobnow almost upon him, he could see no human being, save an old man sittiag in his door, and apparently looking out for the fun to begin of stoning Clristian to death. Lurkily the thought crossed the officer's mind that he old man might be a Mason--Le made a sign, and instantly the Arab rushed out, and placed hinnself by the sile of out, and placed hinself by the sile of the "Christian dog." drove of his would-be-murderers; and conducted him safely to his ship.
We can cite another instance of the fidelity of an Eastern Mason to his duty. About nine years ago an Anerican ves sel was wrecked off the shores of one of the Asiatic Islanus. None were saved from the waves but the captain, who, beins a very expert swimmer, rearhed the isuld. The barbarous natives carried him to their Sultar. When ushered into the presence of the despot, the captain made himself known as a Mason. The Sultian immediately met him on the square, received him as a hrother, treated him with great distinction, and promsed to send him to Calcutta by the first opportunity. The climate was however, so pestilential that our captain soon fell sich with the jungle fever. The Sultan nursed him through all his illness, entertained him like a priuce till he recovered, furnished him with an abundance of money, and sent him to Calcutta, whence he retırned to America.
We will give yet another example, for which we are indebted to an officer of tha British Navy. He had been stationed in

Ausiraliz, and while there he was informed of the following facts, which communicated to us. A party of white men sttempted to cross that great con tinent, but they all perished by thirs and starvation but one man. This man's strength at last gave out, and he laid himself down in the parched desert to die. He had not beea lying there long before at tribe of Australian savages came up, amd would in a few seconds have killed him, hat he not made thatsign which is never mame in vain. The chief was a Mason; he threw himself along. side of the Englishoan and restrained his followers from murdering him. He gave him food and drink, kept him till restored to strength, and then escorted him to the nearest white settlement.Norfolk Landmark.

Lodge Dues.

Masons should pay Lodge dues with the same punctuality as tney would pay a promissury note or an accepted draft. It is a bond, a contract, due at a certain time, and if not attended to, or paid when due, shouid be renewed or canceled by proper action of the Ludge. More attention should be pard to Lodse dues guarded, protected, pressrved, the Lodge might as well go into liquidation as a worthless bank, and cease operation The funds of a Lodge belong to destitute worthy Masons, their wives, widows, or orphans. It is a fund also that should be spent in making y ur bank buildinf re spectable, convenient. comfortable, and supplying it with furniture, books, and tools to per form the abor and worls assigned it to do in an intelligen and creditable manner. A Mason knows very well when he should pay his dues-the by-laws of his Lodg $\geqslant$, that he has selemn ly promised to "stand to and aliade by," state the time that he should pay thrm or neglect in paying Lodge dues, than for breaking any other monied contract with out a cause. Unlike a bank, or individ ual, a Lodge will never force a brother t. pay dres when he isdestitute or unable. It extends the time, or cancels the note, and it is this very fact that causes brothers to presume that they can naglect their obligat.ons, and make their Lodge a convenience to their own neglect or laziness. Pay you Lodge dues, broth-er-it may be but fifty cents, or one dollar per quarter, but pay it; you ciwe it-it is just-it is due. Be a man-an hon est man as well as a Mason, an² pay your honest ciebts. As a rule, a Lodge that is negligent about collecting dues, generalIy does poor work; has slim attendance at Lodge meetings; gives little or nothing for charity, and grows up ignorant of Masonry, and their duties as Masons.-Money is one of the foundation stones of all benevolent and grood societies; other things are essential besides money to make a good Masonic Lodge; but prompt payment of dues begets inary other elernents that naturally are presented to Masons who see the necessity of paying promptly their Lodge dues. ## Masonry.

The universality of Masonry is well 11 ustrated in the First Masonic Lodge of Jerusalem, the Master of which is an Amenican, the past master an Englishman, the senior wa:den a German, the junior warden a native, the treasurer Turl, the Secretary a Frenchman, the junior deacon a Turk. There are Christians, Jews and Mohamedans in the Lodge.

There has become to be something stir ring and sweet in the verv name of ":11 pine horn," its associations are a:l so in lusicaland full of the hills. What manst 1 t be to actuall; hear it-ma to hear it, to when the voice of tus hissat iustrument Kes its finest meaning.
A mong the lofty mountank ind eievated valleys of Switzerlian the Al ine hurn has another use besilits that of sounting the far-faraed "Bans des Vaches," or "Cow Song," and this is a very sole:nn int iu pressive naturg. When the sin has set in the valley, and only the nnowy sum mits of the mountains gie:un with g)den light, the herdsman who dwells upon the highest habitable spot talies his horn and pronounces audibly and loudly through aspaking trumpet, "Praist the Loril God !"
As soon as the sound is heard by the neighloring huntsmen they haste from their huts, take the Alpine horns and re peat the same words. This frequently asts a quarter of an hour, and the nama of the Crat tor resounds from atl the mountains and rock clifs arount. Silence at length settles ar:s the scene. All the tuutsmen kneel down and pray with uncovered heads. In the meantime it has hecome quite dark "Good-night!' calls the highest herds. Man again through his horn. "Gojdnight" again resounds from all the mountains through the horns of the huntsmen and rocky cliffs. The mountaineers then retire to their b, mes and to rest.
If your girl, or her big brother, comes along and points a piscol at you, and tells you to walk down to the minister's and be married, go rifht along and do it; the marriage will be bogus. Thathas recent y been decided by the stipreme court of New Yoik.
