

know?"

Cladys punched me, and in a trembling voice I replied,

"We would know the future of the members of our Senior Class of Montreat. Please, oracle, reveal the future."

"The oracle will grant your request."

Wonderful things were coming to pass; so we waited, frightened and tense.

"The oracle sees Helen 'Hamlet' Hardie in Katherine Cornell's dressing room, waiting for the opening performance of 'Wake Up and Live.'"

"Ann Acree, destined to be a leader, is advocating the law for the prevention of cats catching mice.

"Hilda Grant, using her education received at Montreat and her natural integrity, is assisting Professor Watson in his latest invention.

"Ella Bellette had earned the title 'Most Efficient Secretary' by carefully keeping the pedigrees of all her boss' white rats.

"Ivan Carter is the lawyer for Ann Acree on her case 'Cats Vs. Mice.'

"Mary Clapp is advertising manager for several actors. Among the actors is the successor of Rin Tin Tin.

"Jane Sheegog had changed the book How to Win Friends and Influence People to the politician's version How to Influence Friends and Win People.

"Eloise Williams is running a bakery. Her specialty is lemon meringue pies.

"Peggy Weed is carefully teaching girls how not to make 'hubby' angry by burning the toast.

"Mary Emily Oliver is teaching backward actors in Hollywood how to decline--a noun in Latin. Her partner seems a little like a certain picture to China, where she is desperately striving to teach the little Chinese to use knives and forks instead of chop-sticks. As I peer over the edge of the carpet, I now see Juanita Legg teaching the Hula Hula in an Hawaiian dancing school. Joan Olyatt, who by the way is famous for her canned baby foods, is now sailing to the Orient to attend a kiddy car convention. Jacque Hubbard, with her famous baton, is leading the Knights of the Bath in King George's court. We now turn towards home, the good old U.S.A., to find that out of all our class only one became a writer, Harriet Douglas, whose first book has already made her famous. It is entitled "How to Get Yourself Plus All Your Belongings Out of a Burning Building in One Trip". Frankie Pears, after letting her nails grow another inch, is now playing on the New York stage, the role of Mrs. Fu Yant-chu. Mary Rogers, Anne Dodson, and Mildred Shore have turned to the field of inventing. Mildred has a contraption for opening and closing windows without breaking out the glass and is now touring Asia, selling it to the Arabs. Ann, like her roommate, has placed on the market rubber clothes closets, so made that you won't hurt yourself when you pull them over on you, but Mary Rogers had made the greatest discovery of all by inventing a new method for proving that chicken pie in Montreat is really made of chicken without leaving the bones in. Our twins are still interested in swimming and horses; Ellen, because of her courage, is the first in the class to dare to leap into the cold waters of the sea of matrimony, and Anna is still going around in circles working with the horses on a merry-go-round. Jean Gregory is at present try-
