THINGS SOME OF US DISLIKE or
DELICIOUS TORMENTS

Hazel McIntosh has a horror of snakes and mice. She doesn't like an empty mail box either.

Elizabeth Pearsall says she doesn't like pancakes on Monday morning. "Why should I worry though?" says Elizabeth. "I never come down to breakfast then!"

Maggie Stansbury doesn't like senior classes, so she thinks she will just stay in the junior class next year.

Velma Ragland doesn't like being disappointed via mailbox.

Beth Bagby has little affinity for grits because they just don't have a good taste, and she feels sad when a day is cold and rainy.

Since Elizabeth Oglesby can't have Tyrone Power, she has decided to be an old maid.

Frances Bell doesn't like to write letters that aren't answered. Frances, hasn't the Love Bug really bitten you?

Mary Mellette hasn't expressed her gratitude for the kind donation of dime special perfume to her pillow. Will the giver please drop by and receive her reward?

Here's a strange combination: Margaret Elliott doesn't like snakes, liver, or lessons. "Me too either, Margaret", says Wyolene Hickman.

Miss Hoyt says she doesn't like for people to get mad.

Ruby Wynne doesn't like corn-bread because it scratches her throat.

Miss Maddrey has a horror of mice, frogs, roaches, spiders, and floods.

Frusanna Sneed doesn't like stringy hair.

Mrs. Morton doesn't like a noise on second floor, or a noise on third floor.

Said Nancy Gaston: "Has he a good family background?"

Said Marion Gall: "Has he a good character?"

Whispered Hassie Swift: "Has he any money?"

Asked Mary Neely: "Is he intelligent?"

Demanded Madge Banks: "Where is he?"

"PREVIEWS OF COMING EVENTS"

Montreat, N. C.
January 31, 1939

Dear Barbara,

Exams are over, and it certainly is a relief to know that I passed them all. I suppose you have finished yours too, and I'll bet you came out on top in grades. I told you Christmas how many good times we had last fall. I didn't think there would be anything to do this semester until time for graduation, but today I found out differently. Some very lovely events have been planned for us. Just listen for yourself.

On January 30, all our clubs are going to present a program. I told you about them - the
