

CAMPUS

CHATTER 145

Songs seem to be making Montreat happenings just one long Hit Parade.....
I Hear a Rhapsody.....Edith Boswell's comment when she listens to the voice from Kentucky every week.....Miss Woodhouse leads us to believe she does when she directs the Chapel chanting.....almost any girl hears one every morning at seven in the form of an alarm clock--but it is a bit off key.

Scrub Me, Mama.....Monday's theme song--the day when everything shines from floors to faces.....

I Wouldn't Take a Million.....to hear Celia Delgado's laugh.....for some of that mysterious dessert we weren't served Friday before last.....for Katie Wagner's enthusiasm over "Shanty Town".....for grades like Celia Turk's.....to watch Lillian Tomlinson and Lulu Lee Lyon play basketball.....

I Give You My Word.....that Carolyn and Marion Rowe had the most interesting-looking male visitors we've seen in a long time...that nothing ever thrilled Dema Parker as much as her birthday present of talisman roses and the party the Anderson Angels gave her.....that the only way to keep your feet from falling asleep is not to let them turn in.....that Jo Bourne hasn't had her hair cut since the fifth grade.....that nothing is funnier than Jo Craig's imitation of the Vassar girl.....that Virginia Foster was relieved when her boyfriend wrote that the picture of a rival femme she saw above his head in a picture she had of him was down, and the spot was vacant and open for business.....that Dell Horton and Diana Lee looked sweet dressed alike.....that Miss Cooper looks nice in pink.....that the May Court is exceptionally pretty this year.....

Maybe you know the boy who wanted to be a soda jerker because they led such stirring lives.....and then when the warden asked the prisoners what kind of a party they wanted, he seemed surprised when they said "Open House".....
 Miss Bedinger: "You'll have to give up all mental work"..Frances Taylor: "But I write a column for the Dialectte!"--
 Miss Bedinger: "Oh, that's all right, you can go on with that."

When we asked Edna Campbell what was a good thing to part with, she innocently answered "a comb".....and Jane Boughton had an answer almost as bad when she defined "stoic" as the "the bird that brings babies."

The Perfect Girl

Marion Rowe's hair
 Frances Stanley's eyes
 Louise Emerson's eyebrows
 Sue McCoy's nose
 Mary Virginia Wakefield's lips
 Jane Agee's teeth and smile
 Barbara Alward's chin
 Ava Neil Taylor's neck and shoulders
 Ester Lewis's figure
 Emily Berry's legs
 Margaret Richard's personality
 Frances Ferrier's executive ability
 Catherine Wilkinson's poise