

MONTREAT

SPORTS

With the new semester, both the High School and College Athletic Associations are starting out on a new round of sports. The high school is anticipating its own session of indoor sports this month, and has already caught some of the College's enthusiasm for table tennis, caroms, horse shoes, checkers (American and Chinese) parcheesi, and ring tennis.

The college is experiencing an all-out movement in the direction of the gymnasium for its basket ball season. The Choctaws and Hiwassees had the initial practice of the season on Tuesday, and from the number of girls who are trying out for this exciting game, there will be close rivalry between all the tribe teams.

At the Tribe meetings on Saturday, Jan. 10, the Mohawks and Choctaws elected new cheer leaders. The final closely contested vote on the try-outs resulted in the election of Inez Payne for the Mohawks and Penny Miller for the Choctaws. Ruth Rhea Landis was elected as assistant cheer leader of the Choctaws.

SEVEN DELEGATES AT MISSION CONVENTION

Thirteen hundred forty seven young people from the schools and colleges of the southland attended the "Youth Convention On World Missions" which convened in Memphis, Tennessee, three days, December 30, 1941, through January 1, 1942. Montreat was well represented with seven delegates: Monteen Barnette, Martha Lee Blanks, Marjorie Jordan, Amy Pettitt, Ruby Simpson, Celia Turk, and Sarah W. Baker.

The challenging theme, "Christ, The Church, and The World" was the thought around which the whole convention was built. Through inspiring addresses by outstanding preachers, through carefully planned worship services through effective discussion groups, and through testimonies from young people preparing for full time service, and from young people aided by previous missionary work, the youth of the convention received the challenge, as the Church of the rising generation to carry the message of Christ the Lord to the needy world.

Dr. C. Darby Fulton, well-known chairman of committee on Convention; Dr. H. Kerr Taylor, well-known educational secretary of Foreign Missions, also in the Southern Presbyterian Church, was chairman of the Executive committee for the convention. Dr. W. Norman Cook, Director of Young People's Work of the Assembly, was convention director. Many other outstanding Christians led discussion groups, delivered addresses or served in some other capacity to make the convention the highlight of the Christmas holiday season.

The seven Montreat delegates tell of new courage and inspiration gained to face the trying times of the present crisis, which, when looked at squarely in the light of the Cross of Christ, means final victory for him. The young people were urged to continue college preparation, and not rush at present into defense jobs, without sufficient preparation to meet life after the war. The cry of the world today is for the Christ, and His brotherhood. Today the need for missions is greater than ever, and the number of volunteers we need is even greater than before.

We are delighted to welcome the new girls: Eliz. Wolfe, Jane Baxter, Decie Webb, and Cherric Connor.
