

Future Citizens

The week of April 18-23 was one of major importance to the students of Montreat College. It was during this time that the student body selected their leaders for the school year of 1960-61. Upon these people who will serve on Cabinet as well as carry out the duties of their various offices, rests the responsibility of executing the desires of the student body.

This does not mean that the responsibility must rest solely on those chosen, but the possibility of a successful year depends largely on the attitudes, support, and cooperation of the entire student body. We are future citizens, and this is our opportunity to cultivate an appreciation of the responsibilities and the benefits which come to us because we are free Americans.

Worrying together with an acceptance of this responsibility, the student body of Montreat-Anderson College can rise to new heights, attempt things before untried, bring out the best in every individual, and conquer new goals.

Successful Service Is Support

Once again the elections for the various positions in the student body have been filled. These were chosen carefully and with much consideration. You chose these people because you felt that they would accept the responsibility bestowed upon them willingly and without reservations.

However, these people will not be able to function in the desired capacity unless the student body is behind them . . . pushing, not just standing there watching.

Each person likes to feel that he has done his best when a job is completed. It gives one a great deal of satisfaction to look back on a year of hard work and hear someone say, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant".

The officers of the various organizations have served you this year unselfishly, giving of their time when they had no time. Yet, even this was not enough to stir some of the students to action. Why this nonchalant air, this disinterest in the affairs of the student body?

Everyone knows that the students make the school, not just the few people who hold the major offices. This year's officers are not complaining about the lack of support given them by the students, and in some cases, the faculty. They are, however, pleading for the support of the student body next year.

It is understood that this has been a year of change and decision. It has been an easy job for no one to adjust himself to the circumstances imposed upon the entire population of Montreat by the change in the status of the college. It is with much patience and forbearance that the crises of the year have been met. Everyone has had time to become accustomed to the ways of Montreat.

It is the earnest plea of the present officers that the student body pledge their full support to the officers and faculty next year that Montreat may move forward to the glory of God.

STUDENTS SPEAK:

Dear Editor:

Have you ever felt that you have reached the point of exasperation and were ready to explode? Well, I have! My first gripe is about those persistent little busybodies who feel that they have every right to enter your room and borrow something without asking. I do not enjoy associating with people who do not fully comprehend the meaning of the word "Respect". My second gripe is about those poor people who do not believe in putting their hidden talents to use. Every time I ask for help I get the same answer every time, "I can't." Are these people trying to send the present workers to their grave at an early age? If so, then let me be the first to congratulate them on their accomplishments. God did not give us talents so that we might keep them hidden. He wants our all. How can we as Christians give all if we don't use all that He has given us?

—Concerned

Dear Editor:

Peace, peace, but there is no peace. We've come to college to receive an education, become closer to our Lord, have fun and fellowship through play— Not baby-sit on the softball field. What other college has to have an abundant supply of umpires to see that the balls, bats, gloves, etc., stay in their place?

What other college has to stop a ball

Chapel Choir Gives Concert at Sanatorium

The Montreat-Anderson Chapel Choir presented a pre-Easter concert on April 10 at the Western North Carolina Sanatorium for Tuberculosis. The program was also given in the student chapel on April 12.

The choir featured a solo by Mary Jo Harris, "Were You There When They Crucified My Lord?" and a duet by Grace Caudill and Ella Mae Miller, "When I Survey the Wonderous Cross". Hayder's "Praise The Lord" and Wesley's "Christ Is Risen Today" were used for the closing hymns.

Carolyn Merritt led the choral reading; Julia Worrell read the scripture. Lois Lance accompanied the group directed by Marshae Coe.

game to remove bikes, dogs, glass, and other foreign objects from the field? What other college has to pick up broken pieces of a drink bottle in the batter's box? What other softball team is a group of glorified baby-sitters?

Spectators? Yes, but the Women's Recreation Association would appreciate any consideration you have to give.

—Athlete
