Montreat Gates Open to Students From 15 States, Two Continents

NEW FACULTY MEMBERS - - - WELCOME !

For you sophomores who think the new lady working in the library is an assistant of Miss Price, you are mistaken. She is the librarian, and Miss Price is her assistant. This lady's name is Miss Buchanan. She has worked as head librarian at Montreat for several years. It seems the reason we missed her last year was because of the fact she had taken a year's leave of absence to further her studies. She is now back at Montreat to her true home and we can not express how happy we are to have her back.

For those of you who never visit the business department, you may not have yet met Mrs. Miller, the new shorthand, typing, and business English teacher. She has been a native of Black Mountain since the year 1951. She has one son eleven years old and his name is Burke. During the years she has been living here she has worked in several business concerns in Asheville. Last year she taught school at Owen High School. Now she is here at Montreat, and we hope that she stays a long time. She enjoys teaching here and I might add, we enjoy having her.

Mr. Finley is our new math teacher, as you who are taking math have already discovered. Mr. Finley was born on an Indian Reservation in Nebraska of missonary parents. He graduated from Bellevue (Now Hastings) College. Mr. Finley has worked both in the business world and taught school. In 1957 he retired, and he and Mrs. Finley moved to Asheville, where they have built a home. Since then he has taught three years of math at Owen High School. Now here at Montreat, he has become very fond of the school. He likes teaching students here, because they think for themselves, or at least they are learning to think for themselves.

On Sunday, September 11, the Montreat gates were officially flung open to welcome the incoming students for the term of 1960-61. The welcoming committees were astonished at the cars with many and varied license plates that passed through the gates bearing students that represented fifteen states. North Carolina was found to be the most prominent as she was represented by fifty-one young adults. The "Sunshine State" of Florida gave of her best and sent eighteen southerners, wide-eyed at the beauty of the mountains. Also competing for top honors on the attendance records were Virginia, South Carolina, and Georgia with twelve, nine, and eight, respectively. Alabama contributed four southern belles, while Tennessee, with two, and Louisiana, with one, felt that they had to keep such talent in the "ole home states." Happy with the possibility of converting some Yankees to the ways of the south, students from New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, and Maryland were welcomed with a "Hi, Ya'll!" The western states of Indiana and California were not to be outdone and contributed two truly potential southern belles each. Honduras and Brazil — Honduras and Brazil, South America!!! Those are the facts readers. Montreat had really gone south and is very fortunate in having gained two young ladies from South America.

As the committees left the gates, they compared statistics and found that they had welcomed one hundred seventeen students (ninety-six girls and twenty-one boys) to a year of mental and spiritual growth at Montreat.
