

KAPPA PI BETA SELECTION OF THE MONTH
WOODLAND SYMPHONY

The babbling brook threw up its lead
To sing a bubbly song.
The sleepy birds hopped out of bed.
To answer morning's song.

Up popped the sun, a ball of flame,
He smiled with genial care.
Upon a world which God proclaimed
Had never been so rare.

Mr Robin rose and called the roll,
Violets arranged their skirts;
The Bluebells coyly rolled their eyes
For they were dreadful flirts.

Blue Flag performed a ballet dance,
Erubatus trilled her lines.
The Maiden Ferns the scene entranced.
Jack Pulpit gave the signs.

The overture was grandly played,
The Redbirds were the flutes;
Dame Bluebird was the violin;
Basefiddle tones: owl hoots.

The music and the dance went on;
The audience increaded;
Spring Beauty, Ginger, and Anorono
Loked up their heads and stretched.

Marsh Marigold and Moccasin Flower,
The bluets, Bloodroot, and Iris
Weary at last sank into their bower,
And closed their sleepy eyes.

Then one by one the bird calls ceased,
The brook was a drowsy murmur.
O'er all the woodland there was peace
As Sun sank down to slumber.

The night wind blew her pleasing breath
Across the silent hills.
A sky pale star peeped out with stealth
To view the sleeping hills.
