

APPLIED ART CLASS BEGINS WITH NEW SEMESTER

This semester there are many students taking the Applied Art course. This course encompasses all the techniques of being a good artist. Applied Art is different from Art History, in that the students are given the opportunity to use the methods learned in the former class.

Our artists are using charcoals first to test their drawing skills. At their first class the developing artists began drawing under the supervision of Mr. Douglas Grant, their instructor.

Mr. Grant's home is in Asheville, North Carolina and he is originally from Oakland, California. In California he went to school at the San Francisco Institute of Art. Following his art studies in San Francisco Mr. Grant won a scholarship to the Art Student League of New York.

Mr. Grant prefers water color and his work has captured low lands and shores. He is a member of the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts and The American Water Color Society. His illustration in Edgar Rice Burroughs' The Tarzan Twins, made it one of the fifty best illustrated books in 1957.

Mr. Grant's art class meets for three hours each Monday afternoon and there will probably be an exhibit later in the year of this classes' works.

Does this scene look familiar? Here four students, Gary Brewer, Libby Rule, Marilyn Ball, and Peggy Highnote show off their talent at Snow Man building. While most of the snow has melted by now, Montreat-Anderson Students may expect more before Spring arrives.
