where to go

As the novelty of study wears off,, MAC students are frequently seen outside the fifty mile radius, twenty miles away in Asheville. Although Asheville is not a major city and student entertainment on campus is plentiful, the 'city of the sky' provides occasional amusement and the opportunity for a good meal.

Among the more popular eating establishments, Shoney's is a highly rated standby for a great hamburger or meal. The atmosphere is casual but pleasant, and the tab is moderate. Two Suds and Pizzas are located in the urban area. The preferred one is on Merriman Avenue; the west end location is the worst ever. Those with finer tastes and fuller pocket books, go to the Top of the Square, a formal 17th story restaurant where you are entertained as you eat. As for the in-crowd, there is the one and only Bavarian Celler. Experts testify it's the best.

Naturally, while on the rounds, students must remember the drinking rule.

Asheville's major movie houses, in order order of comfort are: the Terrace, with rocking chair viewing; the Plaza, with the best viewing angle; and the cramped Imperial. All three get the best movies just six months after other cities. Following the movie a few students have been known to visit such places as the Highlander or the Pines, but most of the night spots of the area are taboo.

After finishing their attempted fling students make the hasty return to get their dates in by curfew and enjoy the serenity within the gate. As Allen Ross, a Montreat memory, once put it: "At Montreat the night life is the good life."

"The Boston Strangler" is a slow moving version of Gerald Frank's best selling book. All we can say is that the movie is a faithful rendering of the book. But, since the book wasn't much, a film based on it must have its limitations. Henry Fonda and Tony Curtis give creditable performances in their roles in an otherwise so-so cinematic effort. Critics said Frank's work would never make the transformation to film. How right they were!

"Shenandoah," the story of a civil war family struggling to stay neutral and save their home and honor, is a moving, even occasionally sentimental picture. Jimmy Stewart's nasal twang, coupled with surprising sensitivity, make him perfectly cast as the father. "Shenandoah" is shorter than "Gone With the Wind" and in this critic's opinion, better.

CC DOINGS

People no longer ask, what does the Conservation Club do? The question is "What are they doing next?"

Last Saturday, November 2nd, the club held a dual program of fire and jeep training. Two representatives from the Forest Service gave instruction to more than 20 students. Crews of eight were given actual experience in forming a fire line. The use of equipment was explained and demonstrated.

Meanwhile twelve girls were sort of testing their skill in driving a jeep. For some girls, they were the first jeeps they had even driven. Believe it or not, the jeep still runs, downhill. Actually everyone proved to be natural born jeep drivers, even the fire crews, who later tried their luck.

Next weekend, the 9th, there will be another turkey and archery shoot. And if all goes well, instruction in driving over mountain roads in a four wheel drive jeep will be given.

This year's Spanish Club, Los Amigos, is in need of more members. From the nine who attended last month's meeting, the following officers were elected: President, Carolyn Rickman; Vice—President, Cheryl England; Secretary, Ann Tomlinson; and Treasurer, Judy Wynes. Dr. Reyes is the club's advisor.

Meetings are held the second Tuesday of each month in the Spanish classroom in Gaither at 7:00 p. m. Refreshments are served at each meeting. November 12 is the date of the next meeting, at which plans for Christmas activities will be made.

To join Los Amigos, one must keep his 25¢ dues promptly paid each month and must maintain a C average.

Plans for this year include a Spanish banquet and two trips to Warren - Wilson College. A March trip is scheduled for an evening of music. May's trip there is to a picnic. Also, a project to help the Juvenile Evaluation children is projected. Los Amigos has plans, ambitions, and fun. It lacks only an abundance of members. So, if you are qualified and interested, please attend their meetings.
