MONTREAT-ANDERSON COLLEGE

Someday
soon
we shall be able to laugh

instead of cry,
to praise God
instead of doubt Him,
to remember the good times
instead of the bad.

Our Someday
shall come again
soon.

BIAFRAN

Since last April, millions of children in the province of Biafra have been starving due to the civil war in Nigeria. Nigeria will not give Biafra her independence. Since the war has begun, Nigeria has cut off all supplies going into Biafra in an attempt to starve the Biafrans.

The United Nations Children's Fund has been attempting to bring relief to these people by secretly air-lifting food and by smuggling it over the border into Biafra.

But, more help is urgently needed. The United Nations has asked all of America's college campuses to help raise money to meet this emergency. The Student Christian Association is sponsoring a one-week drive to help these children. They are asking every Montreat student to give up one meal sometime during the week. More meals may be given up if desired. Each student will sign a paper saying what meal they would like to give up. The cafeteria will then cook less food. The money saved from each individual meal will be donated to the Biafra project. Montreat's food drive will be this coming week, Dec. 9-13.

The Greybeard Players of Montreat-Anderson College will present three one-act plays on Friday and Saturday nights of this week. Curtain time is 8 p.m. in Anderson Auditorium. Student admission charges are 75 cents single and $1.00 per couple.

"If Men Played Cards as Women Do" is a satirical comedy about the way women act when they go to another's house to play cards. All characters are played by men making the situation more laughable.

"The Dear Departed" is a hilarious comedy. A wealthy father and the conniving of his two daughters to get his money, is the plot. The fun begins when the daughters think the old man is dead and begin dividing the loot. The father, who is only soundly sleeping, outwits the daughters causing one "Excedrin headache" after another.

"Poison, Passion and Petrification or The Fatal Gazagene" is a farce portraying a jealous husband who poisons his wife's lover. He then has second thoughts about it and tries to save the man's life. It is full of action and humor.

Appearing in the plays are Cheryl England, Flushing, N. Y.; Doug Matze, South Boston, Va.; Wayne Tarrant, Columbia, S. C.; Nancy Crooks, Richmond, Va.; Beverly Hill, New Port Richy, Fla.; Jeff Garner, Bronxville, N. Y.; Margaret Montray, Woodcliff Lake, N. J.; Bill Howell, Sanford, N. C.; Sam Fields, Winston-Salem, N. C.; David Shafferman, Stratford, Va.; Jim Sutton, Winchester, Va.; Kathy Schob, Augusta Ga.; Laura Hall, Salisbury, N. C.; Caroline McDonald, Charlotte, N. C.
