

DORM PRESIDENTS SPEAK OUT

In the next few columns, we have an interview with four students, all of whom have something in common. They are all dorm presidents.

There is no introduction or specification needed for this particular figure because of his outstanding achievements at Montreat. His name is John Furman, and he lives in Greenville, South Carolina, the armpit of the south, where he had been happy for a number of years. His position in this year's student administration is that of dorm president of Howerton hall. After graduation, from Montreat, John plans to go to Clemson University, where he will be studying in the forestry dept. After being at Montreat for four semesters, we asked John what his favorite aspects were. His reply was nothing more than "to have my own room, and a chance to be on SGA." Well, John, come back next year, and we will see what we can do. We did not want only his favorite aspects, but his least favorite ones as well. The fact that people complain to him does not seem to bother him, but when a particular person does all the complaining, that bothers him. He was asked what he thought of Mr. Rhodes, and his reply was "he is, in fact, a fine dorm mother." He feels that the only thing lacking about Howerton is that it is not co-ed, and that Mrs. Rhodes is not making any chocolate chip cookies. John wants all the students to know about the big dance that is planned for the end of the year there in Howerton.

The next person we come in contact with is Martha (Red) Carter. Red is from the small town of Godwin, N. C. She plans to go to Campbell College in the fall where she will try for a BS degree in physical education, and later getting her masters. One of Martha's favorite aspects of her job is getting to know each of the girls individually. She feels that each girl has a special meaning. Will someone please straighten her out? Like most of the other girls, Red is displeased with the hours they have, but some of the girls are immature and present problems. When asked her feeling of Miss Wilson, she said, "Excellent and very easy to work with; a personal touch, sincere, and dedicated." She went on to say that Miss Wilson wants to be more to each girl than just friends. After spending two years at Montreat-Anderson, Red is looking forward to a change. This is not to say that she has not enjoyed her time at Montreat; she just feels that there need to be some changes made. She said "Montreat is not for everyone." Martha wants us to announce that there will be a party for the new dorm president and for the sophomores given by the freshman girls.

In the other girls' dorm, Fran Cooper is the president. Like John, Fran lives in the armpit of the South, where she has been happy for years. Fran is really interested in continuing her education after she leaves Montreat. She plans on going to Poe - Pluckett U. in Bugtussell, Georgia. She wants to major in Hog-Calling, since she has had a lot of experience here at Montreat. Fran acted like a newly liberated woman when asked her most favorite aspect of being a dorm president. She replied, "having beer in my room with no fear of getting caught." When asked her least favorite aspect, she told us "the girls in general." She didn't have much to say about the girls but when asked about Mom Reed, she said there could be "no one else easier to work with." Fran told us of a few very interesting events coming up: like open house and a pajama party on May 10. Fran then left us with this note: "How can one improve perfection?"

continued on page 4

The opinions expressed in this paper are not officially those of Montreat-Anderson College.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: USE YOUR IMAGINATION AND READ ALOUD, INSERTING THE PROPER VOICE INFLECTIONS.)

"Girls, do you want that kind of diet that all the cowboys will just yell, and whistle about? Then quit eating all those fatty foods, and try Yippie-I-A Yogurt. Yippie-I-A Yogurt comes in a variety of delicious flavors; round-emp rasperry, ponderosa peach, branding blueberry, galloping grape, and chaparral cherry. For only 25¢ at your local trading post, and you will be able to enjoy this delicious food. So head 'em up and move 'em out to your nearest store, and stock up with a passel of Yippie-I-A Yogurt."

--comercial by Martha Carter in Mrs. Mitchell's speech class.

the LOOK-OUT staff

Debbi Hood.....copy editor
Rick White.....layout editor
Vaughn Granger...circulation and business manager
Jay Hatten, Shep Plowden...sports
Pam Eastridge, Debi McCurdy, and
Rick White.....typists
Dan Newcomer, Pam Eastridge, Rick
White, Brian Hovey, and Vaughn
Granger.....reporters
J.J. Greagan, Mike Edney, and
Brian Hovey.....photographers
Robert Jones...special contributor
Virginia Gartrell.....advisor
Gordon Williams.....advisor