Jim Wofford plans journalism career

by JUDITH MILLINER

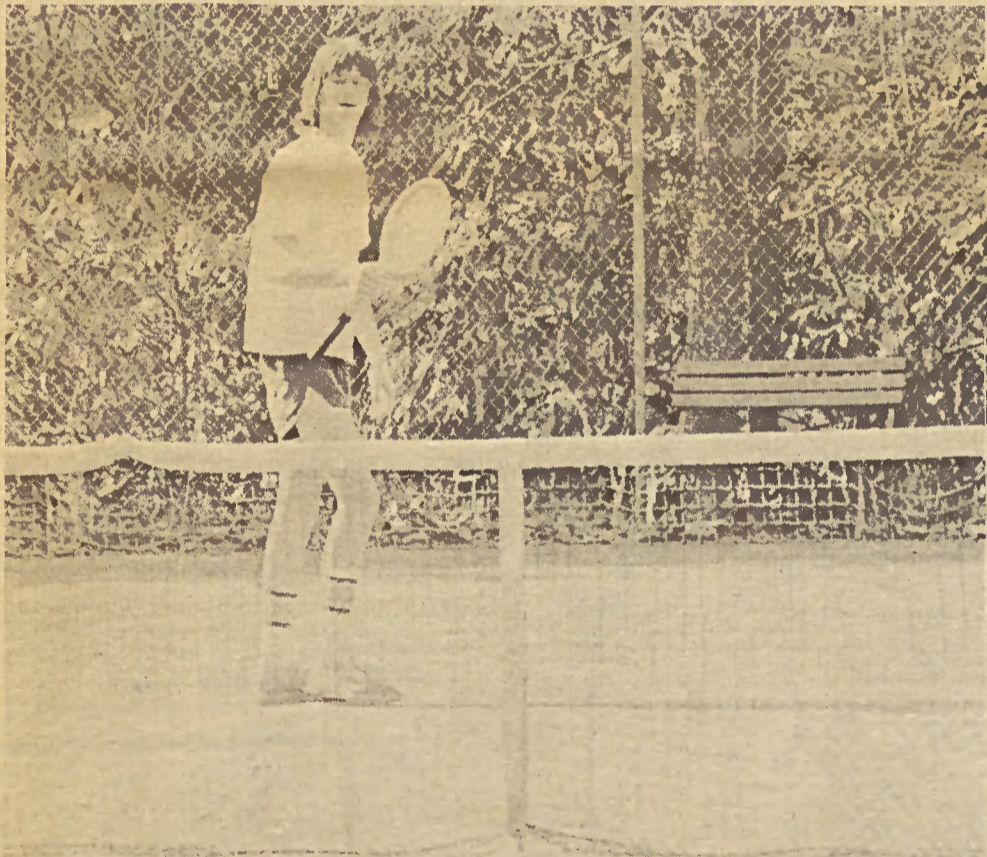

Jim Wofford is a Freshman from Carrollton, Georgia. He has live in Georgia around nine years, but at the age of eight he lived in Edinborough, Scotland where his father attended school at the University of Edinborough.

He loves music and plays the guitar. Rock and jazz are his favorites. Jim is also very athletic and was the Tennis State Champ in Georgia. He likes soccer, baseball, and basketball. He also plays chess, rides motorcycles and horses, camps, hikes the Appalachian Trail, and coon hunts.

Jim would like to to into journalism and major in history. He would like to go to Europe for further education and learn through traveling around the world before he settles down.

Jim is enjoyable to talk to, and, since he enjoys creativity in any form, is a definite asset to our school.

Bill Iwinski to be architect in Venezuela

By DAVID FIELD

Montreat Anderson, like other colleges, has a selection of foreign students which end up working on their education in America for various reasons. One such student here is Bill Iwinski, whose family is now living in Venezuela.

His father is president of the Venezuelan branch of the Pillsbury food company. His work has taken Bill and his six brothers and three sisters to several different corners of the world.

Bill was born in Buffalo, N.Y., where he spent four years before moving to Sacramento, California. His recollections of the three years on the California beach are the hot ocean-front life, where he fished and swam a lot.

From there, the family moved to Cebu, in the Phillipines. They traveled in Japan, Okinawa, and Hong Kong, where they experienced the oriental way of life, which Bill says is slower, easier going, and holding to the old oriental ways and customs. He took up golf, tennis, Jai-alai, water skiing, and spent more time on the Beach.

The family then moved to Calgary, Alberta. Canada was a big change of pace from the tropical life. The temperature dropped to 40 degrees below at times, and he noticed the difference in the North American living standard after five years. The Iwinkis stayed a year then moved to Caracas, Venezuela, where they have lived since.

Venezuela is what Bill calls home now. He loves the ideal climate and great beaches, and he wants to go back there one day to make his home. The people are very hot tempered, but warm and helpful. The city of Caracas is 'buzzing 24 hours a day for anyone looking for things to do. Bill also likes the low priced gas and open speed limits.

Bill's high school principal came from the W.N.C. area and Bill came to hear of Montreat from him. He likes the faculty's willingness to help out students and the size of the student body which makes it easy to know everyone.

Bill wants to finish his studies by majoring in architecture at the University of Colorado at Boulder between his skiing trips. Then he plans to travel back to Venezuela and make a career of his major.

Good luck to Bill and "chaio" as they say in Venezuela.
