Chapel Committee Seeks Variety

By Eric Bush

This year has seen minor, but noteworthy, changes in the M-AC Spiritual Life and Chapels Committee. The twelve member committee is chaired by Dr. Ron Brunson who cited variety as the principal need of the chapel system. He also added; "I believe the main focus of chapels should be the students, because the college is here for the student, and chapel is often the primary corporate worship experience for students." Brunson also said that the purpose of chapel is "to provide for the total M-AC family a time of worship," and that too great a similarity of speakers does not meet the needs of "different traditions that are reflected in our Montreat-Anderson family."

This need is well acknowledged by M-AC students like Rod Steward, who said, "Chap-

Paddling Club will Brave the Rapids

Community and College Plan Clean-up

By Kenneth Graham Jr.

The Relations Committee of Montreat-Anderson College will sponsor a "Trash Parade" around the college campus and Montreat on Saturday, February 13, 1993. The occasion is open to all students, community members, faculty, and staff. This is a time for the college and community to make their surroundings more attractive. This event will be emphasizing the ideas and duties Christians have to keep the environment clean and beautiful.

Greybeard Players Begin Spring Season

Two Plays to be presented in March

By Jamie King

On March 2nd and 3rd, the Greybeard Players tentatively plan to present to the Montreat-Anderson audience two one-act plays -- "The Wooden Pear" and "A Balcony Scene." The former, a play written by Gillian Plowman, is being directed by Janie King. The play's actor and actress are Ed Heidel, playing Daniel, and Melissa Burgess, playing Madeline. Daniel and Madeline meet in the park after Daniel's release from prison, which resulted from his abrupt and unexpected attack on Madeline ten years earlier. Burgess stated that as the play unfolds the audience will feel "tense and shocked." Heidel thought the play would "open some eyes, and clean out some els are becoming redundant. They always have the same old routine. Maybe if they had more variety in speakers, they would hold your interest." Tracey Morrison voiced a different opinion, "I like chapel, but I think the students should be able to help pick out the speakers." The committee is aware of this feeling, and in response has added an SCA representative to ears here at Montreat." In either case, both felt the audience would gain "understanding to the value of their own life."

The latter play, "A Balcony Scene," is written by Donald Elser, and directed by Jen Hardman. Auditions were held last Friday for the three female and five male roles. The plot centers around a man who attends his own funeral. He is shocked as he watches his attendants' attitudes to the play. When Hardman was asked why she chose this play, she responded, "Many times we simply try to give people answers, but often forget to make them ask questions."

When she was asked about the recent auditions that occurred Friday afternoon, Hardman stressed that Montreat-Anderson "has the potential for a strong drama department. What we need now is student involvement. I am really excited that we have people auditioning that haven't before."

its membership, along with continuing student member Justin Ramb, SGA President. Through either of these representatives, the students are free to voice opinions and suggestions to the Spiritual Life Chapels Committee.

Some of the changes, such as more music, have already begun to take shape. The change is expected to be gradual, but some students, like Mustafa Akaskal, have already noticed a difference. He said, "This year has been much better with the addition of Ed Bonner and the music of Rebecca Bush." Through the efforts of the Spiritual Life and Chapels Committee, M-AC students can look for continuing changes and diversity in Chapel services.

treated to lunch provided by the Montreat-Anderson College Dining Hall. The cost of this event is free to members of the Paddling Club and only five dollars for those who will want to be members after this exciting trip.

The trip will be led by Jay Guffey, Brent Ozanne, Randy Olson, and Grant Saltzer. The advisor, Jay Guffey, says the reason for the trip is "to enhance our paddling skills, enjoy God's creation, and to be with friends." Anyone interested in taking a trip that will offer the thrills of dashing hidden rocks and rushing through rapids, may contact the advisor or one of the officers.

Romantic Weekend on the Way

By Marsha Evans

On Friday, February 12, 1993, the festivities for the Valentine's weekend will begin with a romantic candlelight dinner, provided by Jack Spencer and the SGA food committee, which will start at 5:00 and last until 6:15. This scrumptious meal will consist of juicy steak and luscious shrimp. The cost will be free to all students on the meal plan, and all faculty, staff, and off-campus students are welcome for a small fee of $4.75 for adults and $2.50 for children.

After students finish stuffing themselves with this wonderful meal, they will have the opportunity to watch the hilarious antics of the contestants in the King of Hearts pageant. This pageant will be held in Gaither chapel.

Following this splendid evening there will be a special "dress up" Valentine's Dance on Saturday, February 13. The romance will start at 9pm in the Dining Hall and will last until the clock strikes one.
