Spiritual Warfare to be Visualized

By Cara Weiss

Evil spirits from another dimension come alive in the play Screwtape, dramatized by M-AC students in the upper stage of Anderson Auditorium.

This production is based on C.S. Lewis' book, The Screwtape Letters, however, the play itself was written by James Forsyth. The play will be performed on November 18, 19, and 20 at 8:15 pm.

Director Jennifer Hardman emphasized that she had been planning the play for a long time. She first read the play last December, and has been working on it ever since.

Administration Studies Off-Campus Students' Needs

By Marcy Buckner

Resident students retreat to dormitory rooms to study and relax. However, off-campus students do not have a place to call their own.

The McGregor lobby was formerly a designated off-campus student lounge. However, with the reopening of McGregor as the only co-ed dorm on campus, there is the possibility that off-campus students are not as comfortable at this location.

Vice-President Charlie Lance says that there has been talk about the need for a quiet get-away for all students who do not wish to be in the mainstream. However, this idea is only one of many in the brain-storming process of M-AC's development.

One option considered was converting the downstairs room of the library into a lounge. However, this would require more comfortable furniture and pleasing colors. This room may also need to,

Shakespeare Festival Brings Culture to Campus

By Anna Shimaya

The Shakespeare Festival was successful this past weekend. The festival was held in Anderson Auditorium and Dr. Rich Gray was in charge of organizing the event. Dr. Gray commented, "I felt that it was the most attractive and entertaining production that they have done of the three in Anderson Auditorium. I enjoyed the way it was staged. I enjoyed the way they blocked, used props, [and used] gestures to make the Elizabethan language more contemporary. And my favorite scene began rehearsals in early September. According to Hardman, the play is about an elder fiend tutoring a novice on his first temptation assignment. Screwtape shows the temptation of humans from a fiendish perspective.

Hardman had several reasons for choosing to direct Screwtape. She feels that the play will be insightful, daring, and different from anything the Greybeard Players has ever done. She believes that everyone will leave the play with a new perspective, even though everyone may not appreciate the dynamics of the production.

Mark Bolick, who plays the demon named Screwtape, commented, "It's really spooky to play such an unscrupulous character because it opens the door of human nature."

Hardman and Bolick agreed that Screwtape will be a provocative and surprising production that will entertain, as well as challenge individuals theologically, emotionally, and socially.

Mark Wright, who plays Wormwood, commented, "Anyone who has read C.S. Lewis' books is sure to love it."

Sophomore Miriam Chapen submitted, "It's going to be a fabulous play."

SGA bought 200 tickets that will be provided to students on a first come, first serve basis. Any students wishing to bring guests, can purchase tickets. The ticket prices are: $5 for adults, and $3 for students.

Students Gather to Pursue God's Will

Urbanna '93 to Focus on World Evangelism

By Anna Shimaya

Dynamic speakers, exciting missionaries, and attractive exhibits from all around the world will be provided at Urbanna '93.

According to Kurt Grohman, Urbanna '93 will be a giant gathering of college students coming together to focus on world evangelism. It will also be an opportunity for students to get more involved in missions.

Grohman also contributed that the purpose of Urbanna '93 will be to let people know that God can use them to impact the world for Jesus Christ. Urbanna '93 will also discuss how God can use people to impact the world.

Grohman, who is involved with Urbanna, commented, "I expect to see the students that go to Urbanna '93 to come back with a strong sense of what God's will is for their life, whether is missions or not. This will fuel them to reach out to other students who need to be ministered to and need guidance/direction. Also, I expect to see M-AC students going on a summer mission project even if it's just for one week."

at some point, be used as a classroom. For example, the MAPPS program, for older students completing degrees, may need this space to form offices. At this time, nothing has been resolved.

Lance remarked, "In this community, it's more likely that folks don't feel that they have to carve out their territory. Off-Campus students feel comfortable going to any dorm lobby. But if I'm misjudging that, I sure would like to know."

Junior Marcie Blevins, an off-campus student, commented, "I don't have time to use a lounge. If I'm not in class, I'm not here."

The off-campus students have had one meeting, and, according to Lance, will need to have another one soon to look at this issue, and other issues pertaining to off-campus students' needs. Jonathan Woody is the SGA off-campus student representative.

Conference Enlightens Campus About Missions

By Kathryn Letterman

Missionaries from different agencies will be visiting the campus. The Missions Conference will begin tomorrow and will continue until Tuesday.

This is the seventh year that M-AC and Montreat Presbyterian Church have cooperated in the conference. There will be approximately 14 different agencies representing various states. Displays will be set up in the cafeteria for students interested in learning more about various missions opportunities.

Junior Kurt Grohman commented, "I hope that students will take time during lunch to at least pick up brochures and stuff that the missions representatives give away, especially if they want to go on summer missions."

The purpose of the conference is to unite agencies involved in missions, with students who are interested in becoming involved directly with the mission field or with missions related work.

"To lift up Christ in all his glory" will be the theme. Dr. James Plueddemann will be the main speaker and he will be sharing with the students during chapels. Other representatives of the missions conference will be talking with students during their classes and some will even be staying in the dorms overnight, at their request.

The Missions Conference Committee organizes the conference, and consists of members of the Montreat Presbyterian Church, Chaplain Ed Bonner, and student representative Paulette Mixon.

Senior Scott Ward expressed, "It's a good idea to focus on missions because of the necessity for Christians to spread the gospel, whether at home or overseas. We get to talk to actual missionaries who have experienced overseas ministry."
