Tire Exec To Speak At Gardner-Webb

The executive vice-president of the B F Goodrich Company and president of the worldwide B F Goodrich Tire Group will be a guest speaker on the Gardner-Webb College campus October 29, at 9:30 a.m. in the Bost Gymnasium.

The visit of Patrick C. Ross to the Boiling Springs campus is being sponsored by the Broyhill Academy for the Study of Independent Concepts at the College.

Ross will be speaking to the entire student body and guests concerning the country's free enterprise system.

Ross, who joined B F Goodrich in 1962, as a corporate staff supervisor of market planning, has served in a wide variety of management and marketing posts. He was appointed president of B F Goodrich Tire Division (now Tire Group) in 1972 and was named corporate senior vice-president in 1978.

Prior to his appointment as president, Ross was executive vice-president of marketing for B F Goodrich Tire Division from 1970-1972. For six years before that he was with Goodrich International Division, ultimately serving as International Division president from 1969-1970.

Ross was vice-president of marketing, International Division, during 1968. From 1965 he was area director, Europe, with responsibility for all Goodrich European sales and manufacturing operations.

He was the first recipient of the Academy of Marketing Sciences "International Marketing Executive of the Year" award, presented in 1977. During the 1978-1979 academic year, Ross was one of six nationally recognized leaders of industry and business to participate in the Executives-in-Residence program at the University of Alabama.

Ross holds a master of arts degree from the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor.

He currently serves on the Advisory Committee, Center for Economic Education, University of Akron and on the University's College of Education Advisory Committee. He is a trustee of Ohio Council on Economic Education, Akron International Institute, and Akron Children's Medical Center. He also is a member of the Rubber Manufacturers Association Tire Division Executive Committee.

Ross also holds directorships in the Highway Users Federation, Ohio Manufacturers Association and Portage Country Club of Akron.

He is a member of the corporate relations committee of the University of Michigan and Bluecoats, Inc. of Akron.

The Broyhill Academy was created in 1979, by a special gift from the Broyhill Foundation in Lenoir, N.C. The purpose is to develop and conduct programs that will enable the citizenry to better understand and appreciate the economic system of the United States.

Persons desiring additional information should contact Director Dan Moore, Gardner-Webb College at 434-2361.

The public is invited to hear Patrick C. Ross on October 29, in the Bost Gymnasium at 9:30 a.m.

Council Takes Step To Fluoridation

"If you decide you don't want it, you can take it out."

Boiling Springs water was the main subject at the town council's Sept. 29 meeting, as council approved fluoridating the water supply, taking bids on connecting a new well, and repairing old water meters.

Fluoridation was approved after council heard Dr. Bruce Hawkins, regional dental consultant from the N.C. Division of Health Services, explain a grant of federal money available to the town through the state division. That grant, according to Hawkins, would pay the costs of purchasing fluoridation equipment, installing it, and keeping it in chemicals for one year.

"Once the equipment is installed, it belongs to you," Hawkins told the council. "If you decide you don't want it you can take it out," he said, with no specific obligation by the town.

Hawkins estimated approval of the grant by Health Services should take 5 to 6 months.

At that point, when the council turned to discussing drilling a new well, councilman Max Hamrick noticed the board had overlooked taking bids on a pump to raise the water.

"There're really three parts to this job," Hamrick told the council. "The first is drilling the well; the second is getting a pump to get the water out; and the third is getting the water to the plant."

Council agreed, and authorized taking the low bid on a pump.

Problems with broken water meters then came up, as Don Lovelace pointed out that about 40 of the town's 600 meters--6%--need repair. Thursdays were designated repair days.

In other action the council-- was told by councilman John Washburn that Boiling Springs for a second year has won a Community of Excellence Award. Washburn and Mayor Jimmy Greene will travel to Raleigh to accept the award Oct. 27.

agreed to meet on the second Tuesday in November, so as not to conflict with election on the first Tuesday, Nov. 3.

postponed until that November meeting action on buying a new police car.

recognized Ed Abdow, a local manufacturer, who questioned council about the accountability of money budgeted for salaries of three vacant police jobs. Abdow criticized the town's police protection and council's not filling the jobs:

"We have places for three men that are just stagnant now," he said.

Mayor Greene offered to talk with Abdow in a closed session. Abdow declined.

Greene and the council then went into a closed session that lasted shortly over an hour.

Editor's Note

Two errors were printed in last week's View. I want to correct them here. First, the record of Gardner-Webb's football team as of Oct. 8 was 4-0, not 5-0 as we reported. Second, G.C. Greene and Tommy Greene were identified in photos as making molasses at the county fair; they were in fact making molasses at their farm. The View regrets these errors.
