Aunt Harriet always swore I'd go to the dogs.

Mom always wanted me to be a doctor. Dad didn't much care, as long as I amounted to something. But Aunt Harriet was convinced I would come to a bad end.

I finally hung out my shingle today: John Petrie, doctor of veterinary medicine. I could tell Dad was proud, and Mom was really beaming. And even Aunt Harriet got a little misty around the eyes. After all—she's the one who predicted I was going straight to the dogs!
