Would You Believe...

For nearly six thousand years, gold has been prized for its beauty and durability. A fairly accurate estimate as to how much gold has been reclaimed from the earth in the last 500 years is 100 million pounds.

The octopus is a shy creature that usually lives alone among the rocks on the bottom of the ocean. Since it has no real bones in its body, it can stretch itself out as if it were made of rubber. It can squeeze itself between the cracks in the rocks and then go back to its regular shape.

Christopher Sholes' invention in 1870 enabled women to work in offices that previously hired only males and opened up a whole new profession for women. The machine? The typewriter.

Thousands of years ago, there were giant birds. One was so enormous that it was called an elephant bird. Today, the ostrich is the biggest living bird in the whole world.
