Aged Woman Killed By Train Here Friday

Second Fatality Caused by Same Train in County Within a Week. Paul Lee of Benson and Mrs. Jasper Hunt of Selma Are Dead As Result of Accidents.

Soon after the passage of Train No. 89, which passed here about 4:15 o'clock last Friday afternoon, it was learned that a woman's life had been snuffed out near the Union station when knocked from the track by the train.

Mrs. Jasper Hunt, age 68, had gone out on the tracks of the Coast Line with a tin bucket and was gathering up some stray pieces of coal which had fallen from the cars, and had bucket about full of coal. A northbound freight train came along about this time and Mrs. Hunt is said to have left the west track on which the freight was approaching and started to cross the west track when passenger train 89 swept down upon her, killing her instantly. The body was lying about 45 feet down the road between the two tracks from the point where the bucket of coal was lying. It is thought that the noise of the passing freight kept her from hearing the southbound train which snuffed out her life.

Coroner J. H. Kirkman was called to the scene immediately, but after seeing the situation and hearing a few expressions as to how the accident occurred, did not deem an inquest necessary.

Mrs. Hunt is survived by her husband and the following children: Willis Hunt, who holds a position with the Coast Line; Mrs. Kate Radford, Mrs. Bettie Parrish and Miss Roxie Hunt.

Interment was made in the Woodland graveyard about 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon, near Princeton.

Train 89 on this occasion was in charge of Captain Jerome, conductor, and Engineer Hughes, and was the same train which killed Paul Lee at Benson on Tuesday before.

Prof. Boshart Heard By P.-T. Association

His Subject Was "The Importance of Vocational Guidance"—He Assisted in Developing The First County Unit For Vocational Guidance To Be Found In The United States.

Prof. E. W. Boshart, professor in Industrial Arts and Vocational Education at State College, Raleigh, addressed the Parent-Teachers' Association at the high school auditorium Monday night. The subject on this occasion was "The Importance of Vocational Guidance." Mr. Boshart, before coming to North Carolina, was for a number of years principal of one of the larger technical high schools of Cleveland, Ohio, and in this position he had excellent opportunity for developing this type of work. Since coming to the State he has been vitally interested and has fostered the greater portion of the work done. He assisted in developing the first county unit for vocational guidance to be found in the United States. This very excellent piece of work was done in connection with Mr. R. S. Proctor, superintendent of Craven county. At the present time materials used in this organization are being used as models in vocational guidance at Harvard and University of Michigan, they also attracted a great deal of attention at the national educational association recently held at Washington, D. C.

Prof. Boshart stressed the importance of utilizing all agencies for the giving of information on which a child can make an intelligent choice of a life's work. He particularly stressed the fact that guidance did not in any way pigeon hole children to any given trade or profession, but through the increased information available served to guide them more intelligently. He stated that this work should start at the very beginning of the child's home life and continue until that person was efficiently established in this choice of a trade or profession. "The work of guidance," said the speaker, "had its beginning in Boston in 1908, and grew out of a need for reducing a number of life failures." "The second theme of guidance," said Mr. Boshart, "is to assist the pupil in making a choice, preparing for and entering into a life's work."

A MAN MISSING.

The prize fight which was put on at the Sanders Theatre in Smithfield a few nights ago may have been much enjoyed by the spectators; and the fighters may have played their parts well, but while the fighting was going on the man at the window skipped with all of the receipts of the evening, leaving many unpaid bills and nothing to pay them with.

MAYOR HARE ISSUES A PROCLAMATION TO CLEAN UP

WHEREAS, Spring is here, although Winter lingers, we can look about us and see our responsibilities in the very nature of things which is calling us to the task of putting old things behind us and making all things anew—the bursting buds in the forests are unharnessing the old chaffy buds and casting them to the wind as they unfold their new leaves so clean and beautiful where barren branches stood only a few days ago, and

WHEREAS, there are so few evidences of Spring to be seen in those things wrought by human hands about our town that would indicate that our people are keeping pace with the spirit of Spring, and where there are so many barren places about our town where rubbish of several months' accumulation still tends to keep the beauty of our town from unfolding itself in keeping with nature's desire,

NOW, THEREFORE, I take this opportunity to proclaim and do hereby declare the week, beginning Monday, May 2, 1932, as Clean-Up Week for the Town of Selma. Let us harken to the voice of nature all about us and remove the chaff from those barren lots and lanes about our town; and where convenient and proper, plant garden vegetables or flowers which may lift their heads to greet us as we venture forth from day to day. And if we lack the pride or the charm for the beautiful, and our ears are deaf to the call of spring and our eyes are blind to scenic beauty in nature's call, then for our Health's sake let us Clean Up our premises during the week above designated.

Done this 18th day of April, 1932.

W. W. HARE, Mayor.

Prof. Womack Heard At Kiwanis Meeting

The weekly meeting of the Selma Kiwanis Club was addressed by Prof. Nathan Womack, superintendent of the Smithfield schools, on the "Importance of Vocational Guidance." He traced its origin, historical background and modern trends. Throughout his discussion he stressed the importance of this work in reducing the time consumed in preparation and the possibilities of failures.

The speaker also made it very clear that vocational guidance does not attempt to force any child into any given trade or profession, but rather to furnish them with a wide scope of information on the basis of which they could make an intelligent choice.

Glenn Grier, of Smithfield, chairman of the Boy Scout County Council, reported on the progress being made for the Scout Camp School to be held in Selma the week of May 30th. He stressed the fact that the purpose of this was to give the Scouts the opportunity to make a more rapid progress and to train additional adult leadership, the latter factor being one of the present hindrances to scout development.

C. A. Jacobs reported that a number of contributions had been received for use of the camp. Only in this way would it be possible to support the boys for $3 per week. All indications at present are that we will have around 100 boys in camp.

Town of Selma To Advertise Tax Sales

Mr. Hales says that the tax payers of Selma can effect a big saving by paying their 1931 taxes on or before May 12th, when the advertising cost will begin.

Negro Slays Three Then Surrenders

Lamar Faison, of Near Knightdale, Kills His Wife, His Wife's Mother and His Wife's Sister—Thought He Had Killed Five.

Angered over the "bad deal" he had gotten in his domestic relations with his in-laws, Lamar Faison, Negro farmer of the Knightdale section, shot to death his wife, his mother-in-law, and his sister-in-law last Thursday and then give himself up at the courthouse in Raleigh, says a News and Observer report of the affair.

The dead are: Mary Jane Robertson, 59, mother of Faison's wife; Beatrice Faison, 25, his wife; and Lillian Robertson, 15, sister of his wife.

The triple slaying took place shortly before 4 o'clock in the afternoon. Faison, learning that there were two warrants out for his arrest on assault charges, armed himself with two shotguns, and two pistols and visited the home of his father-in-law, Major Robertson, with the avowed purpose of "wiping out the family."

Faison shot his aged mother-in-law first, killed his sister-in-law, then went out in search of his wife, who was at a nearby pond fishing. He met his wife 100 yards from the house and shot her to death with a shotgun.

"Take me, Mr. Tilley," said Faison as he walked into the office of Assistant Clerk of Court E. Floyd Tilley, in Raleigh, accompanied by Russell Weathers, white farmer, who brought him to Raleigh at his own request. "I've killed five people, I think," Faison said. "I don't know exactly how many." Faison had been drinking but apparently was not drunk when lodged in the Raleigh jail.

Deputy sheriffs, notified of the killings, were looking for Faison at the time. Their investigation and that of Coroner L. M. Waring revealed that Faison had been mistaken in the number he had killed.

Mary Jane Robertson was the first victim of the slayings, according to the best information obtainable by the officers. She was shot in the head with a load of bird shot. Faison's wife was shot in the face with a pistol ball and in the breast with a shotgun load. Lillian Robertson was shot in the head with a shotgun load and in the breast with a pistol.

Following the shootings, Faison walked a mile through the woods to the house of Mr. Weathers. He approached Mr. Weathers, who was plowing in a field nearby, and requested that he be brought to Raleigh so that he might surrender.

Allen Robertson, Faison's brother-in-law, was asleep in the Robertson home and was awakened by the first shot fired by Faison. He told Coroner Waring that he heard his younger sister scream, then heard another shot, and looked out of a second story window to see Faison walking down a path. Here he met his wife and shot her dead. The Robertson youth, who is around 17 years of age, said he fired several rifle shots at Faison as he fled toward the woods after killing his wife.

Upon giving himself up, Faison said he thought he had killed Major Robertson, his wife, and two brothers-in-law, but that he "was not certain."

Faison's wife had sworn out two warrants for his arrest Wednesday in Wendell, charging him with beating her and their small son, five years of age. The child was at the Robertson home during the shooting, but Faison did not attempt to kill him.

Deputies Clyde Whitaker, W. G. Maddrey, J. P. Stell, and Joe Partin answered the call to the Robertson home.

Faison and his father-in-law have not been on good terms for years, officers said they learned. Faison had Robertson arrested several months ago on a charge of trying to kill him by giving him poison whiskey. Robertson plead guilty to possession of whiskey and paid $50 fine and costs.

Robertson and Faison had trouble previous to this, the father opposing the marriage of Faison to his daughter.

Faison told Mr. Weathers that Robertson had threatened to kill him recently. He said he returned to the killing to find his relatives had taken all the furniture from his house. Robertson said Faison had the furniture moved.
