MIXING THE ROOSEVELTS.

A few days ago Paul Bellamy, of Rapid City, S. Dak., president of the Black Hills Transportation Co., related an interesting experience. He was riding on a train and fell into conversation with a man who told him he was going to vote for Franklin D. Roosevelt, that he would "like to see a son of T. R. in the White House." When Mr. Bellamy told the man Franklin D. was not a son of T. R., but only a remote relative, he refused to believe him. The incident impressed Mr. Bellamy so strongly that he made a canvass of the passengers in his car and found that more than half of the men and women in it believed that the Democratic nominee is a son of Theodore Roosevelt! What irony it is that the name of a great Republican leader should become a menacing Republican liability!

COMMODITY PRICES IN OTHER DAYS.

Celebrating its fiftieth anniversary, the Wall Street Journal presents a mass of historic data covering the past half century of great interest to the students of finance and economics. Among these is one reviewing commodity prices that has a great deal of significance right now.

"Wheat has been down to 47 5-8 this year but it was three cents lower last year and in 1895 was down to 48 7-8.

"Corn has been at 27 7-8 this year. In 1896 it was 19 1-2.

"Oats have sold as low as 20 1-2 this year. In the five years 1895 to 1899 inclusive they were at some times lower with a record drop in 1896 to 14 3-4.

"Rye has been quoted down to 34 1-2 in 1932. In 1896 that cereal sold at 28.

"Lard at $3.72 a hundred pounds is this year's low, but lard was $3.05 in 1896. It is interesting to note that lard at wholesale sold for $35.85 a hundred in the glittering year of 1919, more than we are paying for butter at retail now.

"Sugar was as low as $3.70 this year. In 1895 it was $3.68.

"Cotton down to 5 cents for New York Middling Uplands this year was at a 50 year low, although in 1898 and '99 it was under 6 cents."

The politically minded will not fail to note that the lower figures in this review hark back to the Democratic administration of Grover Cleveland.

PRETTY POOR BUSINESS.

We do not know the object of the organizers of the so-called "Hoover cart" parades in Wayne and Lenoir counties but if it was to bring into ridicule and contempt the President of the United States it was a pretty sorry business. It was about on par with the slanderous charge made in 1920 that Mr. Harding was a person of mixed blood.

Mr. Hoover is the President of the United States and will be until the fourth of next March, if no longer. He was elected by the biggest vote that any President has ever gotten. He is respected and admired by millions of people in foreign lands, as well as by millions of his own countrymen. President Hoover is probably the most influential man in the world today. The great office which he fills and his own character certainly entitles him to be treated with respect.—Beaufort News.

THE CAMP THAT HOOVER BUILT.

The Democrats are now trying to make it appear that the government bought the land and built the Rapidan camp in Virginia where the President goes for a week-end rest but this canard has been exploded by the Virginia State Commission on Conservation and Development, which by the way, happens to be composed exclusively of Democrats. The Virginia commission offered to build the lodge in the mountains for the President but he preferred to pay for the site and material himself. And Mr. Hoover has also told this same commission that when his term of office expires

EDITOR ALFRED E. SMITH.

BY M. L. STANCIL

Newspaper men recently questioned Alfred E. Smith, in an effort to get something to fight Hoover with. They tried him several times to see how he felt, and whether or not he would support Governor Roosevelt.

Smith reminded them that he was now out of politics, which leaves Mr. Roosevelt in a pretty bad fix. Al would not say whether he would or would not, and that is about as far as his questioners ever got.

They kept on firing questions at a very rapid rate, but Smith refused to talk, so now they will have to wait. Smith said he didn't care about reading of any book, although he he is now the editor of the "New Outlook."

As for newspapers, he reminded them he reads quite a few, and could do his writing when he has nothing else to do. He said that he liked it because he could make some cash, but that he didn't propose to take any one's political lash.

Just vision a man editing a big Metropolitan magazine, who does not read books a few hours daily along between. He may tell many interesting things of the present day, but he can't carry you back to the days far, far away.

Smith may make people laugh rather than to weep, because of the lack of messages that are very deep. He may write about crime, criminals and sundry crooks, but if he gives us a real vision it must come from books.

Can a national politician who once stood so very high, edit a great magazine and completely pass politics by? We wonder what he will say that will make a real big hit, if he ignores politics and don't read some books a bit.

he will deed it to the state of Virginia to be used by his successors in office if they desire it.

While the Democrats are hunting around for something to harp on they might hark back to the extravagance of the last Democratic President and his cruises on the Mayflower. It has been charged and not denied that President Wilson had an electric elevator installed in this floating palace at a cost of several thousand dollars and other regal fittings for the use of himself and his new bride, the "Widder" Gault. The Mayflower was kept in Washington at the beck and call of President Wilson with a highly trained crew and there was hardly a Sunday but what it was put in use. When Hoover came in he ordered the sailors back to their ships and junked this expensive piece of floating extravagance—Union Republican.

NEWS AND COMMENT FROM WASHINGTON

Washington, D. C., August 29.—To those who met the Honorable John Nance Garner, Democratic nominee for Vice President, on his recent trip to Washington and New York, it seemed that a decided change had come over the spirit of his dreams since the adjournment of Congress. On his return to Texas in July he had been all aflame with defiance of the President and the Republican party generally and with confidence in himself as a man "big enough to take care of Hoover." He announced then that after fishing awhile he would come back East and get actively into the speaking campaign.

But it was no flaming crusader who came back last week for a visit to New York and Washington. To the newspaper men in New York he declared that he had come to see his "Boss", to take orders from the "Yankees" wanted him to do. It was too obvious that he was trying to overcome the impression given out by his former Texas utterances that he regarded himself as the head of the ticket, and to make it clear, to the contrary, that he was a very humble and willing ticket-tail, yearning only to wag when the head gave him permission.

To Washington newspaper men Mr. Garner admitted that his famous pork barrel bill would not be made an issue in this campaign (by himself), admitting that it would need very considerable revision before being again introduced. He did say, however, that the Goldborough inflation bill would be made the policy of the country in case the Democrats win the election. That evidently was one point on which the "Yankees" in New York had failed to caution him. In another unguarded moment he said: "I have always done what I thought was best for my country, never varying unless I was advised that 2-3 of the Democrats were for the bill and then I voted for it." A remark which led some ribald Republicans to inquire whether the Speaker meant to say that he is for the good of the country except when he votes as a Democrat.

As to the vigorous and nationwide speaking campaign which the Speaker talked so glibly a month ago about making, that seems, as a result of his visit to New York, to have been put into cold storage. At any rate, in reply to questions as to when he would start out on his speaking tour Mr. Garner replied indifferently that he did not know.

that the later the better it would suit him. And so it is back to Uvalde for the Honorable Jack, while he waits for orders from his "Boss" and the other "Yankees" whose very humble servant he proclaims himself to be.

President Hoover treated himself last week to the first real vacation he has taken for eighteen months. He went down the Potomac with a small party of friends and spent most of three days fishing at the mouth of Chesapeake Bay. The President is extremely fond of this peaceful sport, and the friends who were with him report that he is something of an expert. At least, he was more persistent and patient than any of the other members of the party and has a larger catch to his credit. The important thing, however, is that for four full days he escaped the steady grind of office work and had a chance to think and talk of something besides his official duties.

The strong tone of optimism which has pervaded the business world during the past few weeks continues without abatement. A particularly striking note was struck at Chicago a few days ago when the representatives of 250,000 farmers were told that their organization, the Farmers National Grain Corporation, was making remarkable advances in the field of cooperative marketing. This great farmer-controlled agency handled 140,000,000 bushels of grain in the year ending May 31, and its net earnings exceeded a million dollars. A consensus on agricultural and economic conditions of the delegates from 28 States revealed the fact that farmers everywhere are optimistic. Rising live stock prices have increased farm buying power by millions of dollars, grain prices are improving, and crop conditions are excellent. Maybe we HAVE turned the corner!

Farmers in Avery county have cooperated in developing a market for the green bean crop and are now receiving better prices than when the beans were sold in job lots.

BIG WATERMELONS.

J. W. Finch, of Saratoga, Lenoir county, the past week pulled 10 watermelons from his patch that weighed 1,036 pounds. The largest of the 10 weighed 110 pounds. Finch will preserve the seeds from these melons and distribute them to the growers in his section.

ERWIN BALL TEAM DEFEATS SELMA MILL

On last Saturday, August 27th, the Selma Mill Boys crossed bats with the Erwin Boys at Erwin, and got beat to the tune of three and nothing. We are going to tangle with them again next Saturday, September 3rd, on our own grounds. We want a good crowd to cheer us on and see if we dance to the same music as we did at Erwin. COM.
