Farmers Urged Use Certified Ladino Seed

Tar Heel farmers were cautioned this week to use only certified seed or its equivalent in seeding Ladino clover in permanent pasture mixtures.

Dr. F. J. Bell, seed specialist for the State College Extension Service, pointed out that Ladino, the new "miracle" pasture plant, cross pollinates freely with white clover, a small strain that produces from one-third to one-half less forage than Ladino. Use of anything less than pure Ladino seed will result in inferior pastures, he said.

According to Dr. Bell, wild white clover grows naturally and volunteers somewhat freely under stimulated fertility on farms, along roadsides, and in lawns over most of the United States. Thus the task of producing pure Ladino seed is difficult.

In fact, says Dr. Bell, the only large areas known to be producing Ladino seed free of white clover cross-pollination are the States of Washington, Oregon, and California. There, Ladino is being grown under irrigation in virgin desert soil where no white clover has ever been produced.

Farmers in these West Coast areas have adopted strict measures to keep wild white clover out of lawns, roadsides, and seed blocks, thus affording the isolation needed to produce pure Ladino seed. In fact, in some sections white clover is legally classified as a primary noxious weed.

The State College Extension Service and the State Production and Marketing Administration recommend the use of Ladino seed grown in Washington, Oregon, or California. This recommendation has been formally endorsed by the North Carolina Seedsmen's Association.

Dry weather forced Ladino to blossom abundantly and produce a large crop of seed in some North Carolina counties this season. As a result, many growers produced a bumper crop of seed and may have difficulty in disposing of it. However, says Dr. Bell, acceptance by farmers of anything less than absolutely pure Ladino seed will endanger the State's current "Green Pastures" campaign, in which all agricultural agencies are cooperating.

A GUIDE INTO TRUTH

"for the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears; and they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables" (II Tim. 4:2,3). Thus Paul the apostle described some whom he met in his missionary journeys. If he were alive today, he would also find individuals who "turn away their ears from the truth."

God has not left those of us who trust in Christ without a guide, however. That Guide is the Holy Spirit. Jesus spoke of Him as "the Spirit of truth: whom the world cannot receive, because it seeth Him not, neither knoweth Him: but we know Him; for He dwelleth with you and shall be in you" (John 14:17), and "Howbeit when He, the Spirit of truth, is come, He will guide you into all truth" (John 16:13).

Christ not only spoke of the Holy Spirit as a Guide, but also as a Comforter. "And I will pray the Father, and He shall give you another Comforter, that He may abide with you forever" (John 14:16). The word Comforter comes from the Greek word Parakletos, "one called alongside to help." Certainly, God the Father has amply provided for our needs!

On the day of Pentecost, as related in Acts 2, the Holy Spirit came as Jesus had promised, and all believers in Christ were indwelt with the Holy Spirit. As believers today, we can look to the Holy Spirit who dwells in us with perfect confidence. He will help us to correctly interpret the Word of God, and discern that which is false or true in the teachings of men.

Only those who are born of the Spirit through faith in Christ as Saviour are indwelt by the Holy Spirit, however. Jesus said to Nicodemus, a ruler of the Jews, "That which is born of the flesh is flesh; and that which is born of the Spirit is spirit" (John 3:6), and summed up the whole matter of the new birth, or salvation, in this statement: "For God so loved the world, that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life" (John 3:16).

A near-record quantity of nearly 60 million pounds of frozen strawberries moved into storage during June of this year. This, together with large holdings of frozen orange juice concentrate, boosted midyear supplies of frozen fruits to new high records.
