IN NEW BERN TODAY

College students and high school students alike enjoyed one thing above everything else during the Christmas holidays.

What gave them the most pleasure was sleeping late in the morning. If we had the chance we slept until 10 o'clock at least. Some of us were still in bed at noon.

Usually, someone more energetic than we were would call on the telephone and spoil it all. Or our mothers would nag us to get up and help with the housework.

Then, of course, some of us had younger brothers and sisters to interrupt our slumber. What can be more exasperating than a kid brother banging things when you're trying to catch up on your sleep?

To the college crowd, sleeping was a real luxury. Off at school they have to be up around 6 a. m., in order to eat breakfast before early classes. Most of them say they try to eat a good breakfast, even the ones who didn't eat breakfast in high school days.

What made sleeping even better during the holidays was the fact that most of our parents permitted up to keep later hours. In our homes, as well as outside with our friends, bedtime wasn't as early as usual.

Quite a few of us had holiday jobs at various stores, so in that case the joy of sleeping late was out of the question until after Christmas. We have been making up for it since then.

Speaking of work, some of the college crowd have jobs off at school that are similar to the part time jobs they had while attending New Bern High. Michael Miller for example, works with a Greenville florist while attending East Carolina, and Marshall Braddy works at Blount-Harvey department store.

Very few of us spent Christmas away from home. It's a time when you want to be with your family.

Happy New Year!
