

As Seen in The Mirror's SPORTS REFLECTIONS

of Athletes and Events

It looks like a fine season is in store for the New Bern Recreation Department's Pony League. Pre-season contests have given the youngsters a taste of what's coming, and they're all set for games arranged for the regular summer schedule.

Softball is getting off to a good start too, which isn't surprising in a town that goes for the sport in a big way. Incidentally, this new generation may not know it, but their own Dads didn't know what softball was. They played a lot of baseball however, on the nearest vacant lot.

Wallace Wade's resignation as commissioner of the Atlantic Coast Conference, and his announced retirement from the sports scene, is a matter of keen regret among athletes, officials, coaches and fans.

One of the all-time greats in the coaching profession, when he led Alabama and Duke to the grid-iron heights, he is first and last a real gentleman. New Bernians who recall the night he spoke at a Duke alumni banquet here will readily agree.

Wade, unlike some coaches who curse and browbeat their players, achieved spectacular results by treating them with respect. He didn't pamper them, but by the same token he wisely took the attitude that a boy with the right qualifications to be a successful athlete doesn't profit from needless abuse.

Wrestling and track may have been regarded as "minor" sports when they were added to the athletic program at New Bern High School, but most of the sports glory reaped hereabouts this year came from the noteworthy performances of these two teams. Which just goes to show how important a diversified, well-rounded program can be.

If you can't love your enemies, compromise—forget them.

HANDY MAN — New Bern had better ball players than little Howard Hobgood in Coastal Plain days of yore, but no Bruin ever hustled more. He was a great favorite with the fans, so we figured you'd like it if we ran his picture for old time's sake.

MIRROR MEDITATION

"Once people come to America, the great majority stop being anything else but Americans . . . I love America, not because once I was a ragged newsboy on the streets of Los Angeles at the age of six—but because it is possible in America for a six-year-old newsboy to grow and dream, and to make his dreams materialize into realities . . . The poor man here has no hide-bound heritage of class and position to keep him down. He has a heritage of courage and adventure . . . The common man in America doesn't look forward to oppression and a static existence. He looks forward to accomplishment, to liberty of action, to hope, to becoming a dignified individual and not a product of mass production, like bottle-tops. Our mass production has been limited to material things, but a man's spiritual life and his thinking are still pretty much his own in America! . . ."
