

Buds AND Blossoms

By MAMIE MILLER

"For wisdom, the fashioner of all things taught me: For she is the breath of the power of God, And a pure emanation of the almighty glory; For she is a reflection of the everlasting light, And a spotless mirror of the activity of God."—Wisdom of Solomon 7:22-26.

The colors of the fall are appearing. Many plants are dropping their leaves, preparing for a dormant season. The insects that have been fed bountifully during summer are appearing on the stems and under leaves of plants. There are many more because the spring crop has matured.

Last week the newspapers carried an item about the danger of wasps, hornets, yellow jackets, bees and snake bites. Most of the deaths were from insect stings.

Some home remedies for stings are baking soda and vinegar, vanilla flavor and soda, nicotine from snuff or tobacco. An aspirin tablet or a bottle of turpentine will draw the poison out. If you have an allergy be sure to see a doctor at once—one sting can mean instant death. Usually it occurs from insects in about an hour. Be careful and watch for snakes. To be safe see your doctor for bites.

There are many bulbs that may be planted now to make a big show even when the snow covers the earth. The Helleborus Niger, or the Christmas Rose is a large blossom of purest white with a blush of rose, above a mass of dark leaves. They grow 10 to 12 inches high and bloom from November until last of winter. They like half shady positions and plenty of cow manure and leaf mold.

Leucojum Vernum (a spring snowflake) is a bulbous plant growing to a height of eight inches. It blooms in late April. It is a white flower tipped with green. It is excellent for cutting.

Scilla Campanulata makes a beautiful show. They are nice for naturalizing and love shady places. They look like hyacinths. They come in white, blue and peach. They are nice for cutting too.

Grape Hyacinths are a must in any garden. They peep through the snow and make a great display of color. They come in white and blues.

Chionodoxa Luciliae and Scilla Sibirica are lovely rock garden plants. They come in blues.

Kehoe — Fri.-Wed.

James Stewart and Lee Remick star in Otto Preminger's "Anatomy of a Murder" at the Kehoe Theater Friday thru Wednesday. Children will neither understand nor enjoy what critics are calling the outstanding film of the year, but seeing it will be an unforgettable experience for New Bern adults. America's press has been unanimous in saying that this performance by James Stewart is his greatest of many screen triumphs.

I will follow thee alone,
Thou animated torrid zone!
Zig-zag steerer, desert cheerer,
Let me chase thy waving lines;
Keep me nearer, we thy hearer,
Singing over shrubs and vines.
—Ralph Waldo Emerson.

There are many ways to get even with your enemies, but none of them leap upward.

Never underestimate the shrewdness of a six-year-old boy. To prove our point, here's what happened down at Jacksonville.

Seashore Transportation Company operates a school bus there, similar to the bus for New Bern High school children that leaves from the corner of Middle and Broad streets each morning.

On the bus at Jacksonville, a brand new first-grader lost little time in starting a fight that was entirely unprovoked. The bus driver, fearful of a recurrence, took the pugnacious lad in tow and drove to a house where the youngster said he lived.

As soon as the bus stopped, the boy jumped out and ran into the house. It later developed that he ran through the front door and out of the back door, without so much as pausing.

A woman came to the door, and the driver went into lurid detail in describing just how badly her child had behaved. She listened without interruption until he spoke his piece.

Then she exclaimed, "It sounds terrible, but it so happens that the little boy who just dashed through my house isn't my little boy. In fact, I don't have any little boys, and I've never seen this kid before in my life."

Not only had the culprit staged a near riot on the bus, but was clever enough—if clever is the word—to lead the driver on a wild goose chase that was anywhere but in the direction of his home and a mother who probably would have tanned his hide.

Maybe your six-year-old isn't that mean, or that foxy, but the chances are you've been outsmarted quite a few times yourself by your own children.

Different youngsters pull their fast ones in different ways, but they're alike in one respect. They're cunning and they're sly.

Last Year's Best Book—

This Year's Best Picture!

A sensational best seller, it has been transferred to the screen as a dramatic epic that will implant itself in your mind and heart as a memorable motion picture.

You will never be entertained by a finer story, so wonderfully enacted by a splendid cast. Here is film narration at its best.

James Stewart reaches the pinnacle of his great acting career, as the easy going, small town lawyer who turns tiger in the courtroom to face his foe.

We do not recommend this movie for children. They won't understand it or enjoy it. But for adults we can say without exaggeration that you will find it the most exciting and most entertaining motion picture of the year, and one of the best in screen history.
