

MIRROR MEDITATION

By EMMITT L. BRINSON

There are many people who sincerely believe in reincarnation because of certain experiences, as well as having read a great deal of literature written on the subject. I have been confronted many times with this same challenge. As in other mystifying questions I have made an honest search to satisfy myself.

With all honest doubt regarding the dimensional or spirit world, we can only review the reports of scientific research and valid knowledge. Beyond that we must decide for ourselves and accept that which fits our own conscience—our own souls through faith.

Medical science has made tremendous advances in psychology and psychiatry in the past few decades. The sciences are finding more and more truths locked within the depths of man's mind as well as tremendous sources of talent and knowledge as though it was inherited or already there.

They further help the individual to tap this power and steer them into using it to overcome many heretofore incurable diseases, illnesses and complexes, which had destined their lives to doom.

In working with the mind, which grows more mysterious even after exploring its depths, science has come upon techniques that baffle the understanding of ordinary men. Techniques such as psychotherapy, hypno-therapy, psychogenetics and biogenetics are still in their infancy.

Yet, it has revealed many mysteries. Some would be best taken with an open mind, yet many experiments are phenomenal, and leave one with a "let's wait and see" basis. Others appear to be solid facts. The area of fraud in some reports is conclusively removed.

There are machines invented and used today, similar to the lie detector, that help our medical scientist to detect the truth in hypno-therapy. They are called electro-psychometers. In taking one back to the basic cause of certain complexes and psychic illnesses, many patients under hypnosis tend to regress into experiences that after searching their minds, seems to take their memory into past lives.

To the scientist and patient this is very real and nothing can shake their conclusion. Some, however, hold on to the contrary, and try to explain this away, as being possible through biogenetic inheritance, or passed on through the hereditary genes.

Medical science proves that, attached to each of the male sperm are 24 or more rod-like structures of Chromosomes. Each chromosome carrying thousands of bio-electronic systems or genes. Each gene a system of molecules with electronic universes of physical

In New York, playboy Tony Ryder (Dean Martin) inherits the publishing company upon the death of his uncle in Palm Beach. The detective brings news of the mystery girl seen running from the uncle's room and Tony's associates, fearful a scandal could topple the rocky firm, induce him to track her down. Suspicion points to Katie, but Tony, attracted to her, doesn't want to believe the circumstantial evidence.

The number of genes in a chromosome count into the thousands. The genes of the male and female pair off into chance patterns numbering countless billions. The actual phenomena of this guided order is too involved to elaborate here, but very definitely countless hereditary cells pass on to the offspring.

That part which makes up the brain as well as all the intricate mechanisms of the body could well be the reason why, when regression under hypnosis is experienced, certain unknown factors could cause the brain to react into thought energy patterns of some experience of our fore-parents. This would make one feel it actually happened to them in some past life.

There comes to mind the Bridey Murphy story that became a best-seller. The outcome of the persons involved is more astounding than their awesome experience. Ruth Mills Simmons who regressed under hypnosis by Morey Bernstein, recalled a life in Ireland as Bridey Murphey.

She is now 38 years of age and married. The now Mrs. Tighe has three children. She has never read the book, but heard her voice played back on the tapes. She has turned down offers that would net her millions for appearances, etc. She wants to be left alone. She regrets most of all some people thinking the experience was a fraud or a hoax.

Morey Bernstein, also rejected like offers to further fame and fortune. But he has gained even more. He was an admitted atheist. He had always been convinced that when a person was dead, that was it. He was through, fully dead. There was no meaning to life for him.

He didn't even believe in hypnosis, and surely not in reincarnation or mysteries of the mind. Now

Rain, Early Plants Hinder Fumigation

Heavy rains and early tobacco plants may complicate matters for those who want to fumigate their tobacco fields for nematode control. Fields that are heavily infested with nematodes may produce very poor crops if not fumigated; however, if the fumigant does not get out of the soil before transplanting occurs, poor stands, poor growth and sometimes complete failure result.

It is recommended that you wait at least two weeks after fumigation before transplanting. Even two weeks is not long enough under certain conditions. In most cases, it is best to open the row or re-ridge it to break the crust to allow the fumigant to get out of the soil.

If your plants appear to be ready for transplanting before the two-week waiting period is over, you can hasten the escape of the fumigant and transplant a little earlier. After the fumigant has been applied from five to seven days, it has done what it is going to do in killing nematodes. The remainder of the time is merely for getting the fumigant out of the soil. You can hasten this by opening the row any time after the five to seven days have passed after fumigating. The fumigant will escape faster if the row is left open two or more days. Then re-ridge and transplant tobacco.

Merely opening the row and re-ridging at the same time will help the fumigant escape. This will break the crust that has formed

Where you use the broadcast method of applying fumigant, you can disc the land five to seven days after fumigation, wait about three days, prepare your land and transplant tobacco.

In the event it rains immediately after re-working the row or disking the field, the rain will cause the soil to settle, partially sealing it up again and this will delay the escape of the fumigant.

he seems to have found his soul. He states emphatically that reincarnation is a fact. His life is completely changed. He had not used hypnosis since. Now psychiatry uses retrogression under hypno-therapy in countless thousands of cases for many cures.

And what should the ordinary layman believe? Science does not know exactly how we inherit physical and psychical characteristics. It is still a mystery. We lack the terminology and facts to deal with it properly.

One should accept only that which fits his own soul. But pray keep an open mind. God is much greater and more powerful than anyone can possibly imagine. I would not want to take any kind of stand that would tend to limit the power of God. For this I believe: "That through God, anything and everything is possible. His wonders never cease."
